

HAVE KIDNEY WILL TRAVEL?

OTTAWA (CP)—Organ donor cards have been enclosed with some airline tickets mailed out by Air Canada headquarters in Montreal.

But protests about the Kidney Foundation of Canada brochures evidently surprised airline public relations officials. One official said the person who sent out the brochures would be asked to stop.

"The Kidney Foundation of Canada is seeking your pledge of not only kidneys, but, if you desire, any or all organs that may be transplanted upon death to others who desperately need them to survive."

Like Ontario driver's licences, the back cover of the folder is an official donor card allowing the traveller to give away what he chooses for medical transplants or research.

An Air Canada official said in a telephone interview from Montreal that someone from the airline apparently picked up an armload of Kidney Foundation brochures to support the foundation's campaign to increase awareness of the severe shortage of organs for transplant.

June was organ donor month in Quebec. The Air Canada official said there had been protests about sending the brochures to people who were about to board Air Canada flights. The brochures were sent out by the airline's ticket-by-mail branch.

The organ donor idea was not airline policy, he said. The airline view was that if it backed one worthy cause, it would be flooded with requests for support from other groups.

A Kidney Foundation spokesman indicated concern about public reaction to including the foundation brochures with airline tickets.

"People might become a bit leery about flying," he said. "These things have to be evaluated."

'DOUBLE SEAT' UNDERWEAR FOR PENS

OTTAWA (CP)—The government is spending $61,620 on new double-reinforced underwear for prisoners in federal penitentiaries, the department of supply and services says in its latest contract bulletin.

The bulletin shows that a contract has been awarded to Pennman Ltd. of Montreal to manufacture 36,018 pairs of underpants reinforced with what the company calls "double seats."

"That's because the prisoners have to do a lot of sitting down," a spokesman for the department said Monday in an interview.

The underpants are plain, white cotton briefs described as summer wear. Long johns or thermal underwear were not ordered because penitentiary prisoners do not go outside often, the spokesman said.

"I guess if any of them started asking for long johns, the prison staff could assume an escape bid was in the air."

Flu Shot Delay Urged

FREDERICTON (CP)—A program to vaccinate millions of Canadians against swine flu should be delayed until there is more evidence that it is necessary, provincial health ministers said today.

But they said an immunization program for an estimated 1.5-million senior citizens and chronically ill persons should go ahead as soon as the vaccine is available, probably in mid-November.

In addition, they recommended that planning for the larger immunization program continue, just in case.

The modified vaccination program, to be recommended to all 10 provincial governments once the ministers return home, was announced in a four-page communique issued as the ministers ended two days of private talks.

The ministers said they made the recommendation because there hasn't been a case of swine flu since February, when it was discovered at a military base in New Jersey.

In Vancouver, provincial epidemiologist Dr. A. A. Larsen said Monday swine flu vaccine will be available in B.C. after Oct. 15 provided there are no further hitches in manufacture and testing.

The first shipment is due Oct. 9 and the entire million doses earmarked for B.C. should be in hand by early December, he said.

Consumer Spending The Key

Times News Services
OTTAWA — A private economic research group says economic recovery is under way, but how much depends on the willingness of householders to spend on consumer goods.

The Conference Board in Canada said Monday in its latest quarterly forecast that real growth in total output of the economy will be five per cent in 1976 while unemployment will grow gradually to a peak of 7.5 per cent in 1977.

Citing recent economic growth and moderation of price increases, the board said the recovery appears to be similar to post-war economic growth and new housing activity providing a good part of the early strength and the trade sector about to play a positive role as well.

"The real question at this point concerns the longevity of the cyclical recovery with the outlook for investment spending remaining poor and with a policy environment that is less stimulative than in past post-war recoveries."

Businessmen have complained that the federal anti-inflation program, particularly rules restraining profits, have led to a decline in investment which is hampering a faster improvement.

There have also been slowdowns in investment in the U.S. which does not have wage-and-price controls.

The board says that 1976, increased spending on consumer goods in real terms will grow by 5.7 per cent, with a decline to five per cent next year.

But while it says increased consumer spending will be an important source of growth, projected growth rates are still moderate compared with

Blast Kills Ex-Chile Diplomat

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two persons, including a former foreign and defence minister of Chile who was ambassador to the United States during the government of Salvador Allende, were killed today when a bomb demolished a car in northwest Washington.

Hospital officials identified the former Chilean official as Orlando Letelier, 44, an ally of Allende who lived in Washington.

A socialist, he served as consultant to the Inter-American Development Bank in Washington before being named ambassador in 1970. In 1973 he was named foreign minister and became defence minister a month before Allende was overthrown and died.

Also killed was Ronnie Karpen Moffitt, 25, a staff member of the Transnational Institute of Policy Studies where Letelier was a director. Her husband, Michael, was in fair condition in hospital.

Bank Can't Find Right Woman

TORONTO (CP)—Robert MacIntosh, executive vice-president of the Bank of Nova Scotia, said Monday his bank has been unable to find a woman to sit on its board of directors.

MacIntosh said his bank has been looking for a woman to sit on the 36-member board since late last year.

"I guess the biggest single problem has been the Bank Act," he said. "It requires a person who sits on the board to own 2,500 shares of the bank's stock although there is a provision for a smaller amount in some cases."

At the bank's present share price of $43, MacIntosh said, that would mean holdings worth more than $100,000.

The Bank of Nova Scotia is the second Canadian chartered bank to say it has been unable to find a woman to sit on its board. The Royal Bank of Canada recently said it has been unable to find a suitable woman despite a country-wide search.

MacIntosh said the Bank of Nova Scotia has had active discussions with women's organizations about the subject for some time. He said he expects a decision on the issue will probably be taken later this year.

W. Earle McLaughlin, chairman and president of the Royal Bank, has received heated criticism for remarks he made earlier this month to a bankers' meeting in Winnipeg.

He told the meeting that the Royal Bank has been unable to find a woman who meets the bank's qualifications.

Mona Campbell, the only woman on the Toronto Dominion Bank's 38-member board, said Monday one of the main qualifications for board membership is ability to bring business to the bank.

BUMPER CROP of stickers is being distributed by the Insurance Corp. of B.C. to promote use of seat belts in the province. ICBC officials estimate fatalities and serious injuries can be cut by 50 per cent if all people in cars buckle up. Compulsory seat belt legislation has already been passed in Ontario and Quebec and is being considered in B.C.

Smith Accepts Black Rule, Tanzanian President Told

Times News Services

DAR ES SALAAM — President Julius Nyerere of Tanzania said today he has been told by U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger that Prime Minister Ian Smith has accepted the principle of black-majority rule for Rhodesia within 18 months to two years.

As a consequence, Nyerere told a news conference, he is no longer "gloomy about prospects for a Rhodesian settlement."

He said after a 90-minute meeting with Kissinger that he awaits a public statement from Smith's white-minority regime Friday.

"My mood is better," Nyerere said.

Meanwhile in Salisbury, Smith's cabinet today adjourned crucial talks after more than three hours of "straight talking."

Smith's 21-member cabinet is to meet again Wednesday.

"You cannot accept big proposals in a rush," he said.

The Rhodesian leader told reporters that if the cabinet and his parliamentary party caucus accept the proposals, a two-thirds majority would be needed for approval in the House of Assembly lower house of Parliament. All constitutional amendments require such a majority.

Smith said the final decision on whether the package is acceptable would effectively rest with Thursday's meeting of the 50 members of Parliament representing the ruling Rhodesian Front Party.

A senior U.S. official in Kissinger's party said that following his talks with southern Africa's white leaders he now is seeking five pledges which Smith wants from the area's black leaders.

One is that all guerrilla action in Rhodesia be suspended as soon as negotiations begin for a constitution providing for the transfer of power to the black majority.

The second is that the security and interests of Rhodesia's 270,000 whites be effectively safeguarded when power is transferred to the six million blacks.

BCGEU Rejects $45 Hike

The 35,000-member B.C. Government Employees Union has rejected a $45-a-month wage increase offered by the Public Service Commission.

The results of the vote will not officially be released until Friday, but it is believed the offer was rejected by about 60 per cent.

The union's executive had earlier recommended rejection of the offer.

The executive will meet Friday morning and the results of the vote will be announced after the meeting. The executive will also consider the union's position on the Oct. 14 national day of protest.

Vander Zalm Probes Immigrants

Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm said Monday his department is investigating sponsored immigrants who go on social assistance or Mincome soon after having arrived in Canada.

The minister said he doesn't think it's right that a person can make application for Mincome after being in Canada for only two years.

The minister says the immigrants will, by and large, draw more benefits in the first year than they would ever have paid in income tax or other contributions.

Vander Zalm, who immigrated to Canada from Holland many years ago, says some nationalities are worse than others, but he wouldn't name specific countries.

Safeway Talks Collapse

VANCOUVER (CP)—Talks in the province-wide Safeway labor dispute ended Monday for the second time after nine days of mediation.

Independent mediator Clive McKee said although agreement was reached in some areas, it was not sufficient for the parties to reach a settlement.

No further talks are scheduled.

The negotiations under McKee between Canada Safeway and the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union started for the second time on Sept. 11.

McKee withdrew from the dispute Sept. 7 after exploratory talks failed to resolve issues that closed 93 retail stores.

A key union demand in the dispute which has idled about 3,300 employees is for a clause allowing the right to strike over non-economic issues. The clause was contained in the previous contract but ruled illegal by the B.C. Labor Relations Board.

Employees were locked out Aug. 19 at the company's McDonald's Consolidated Ltd. and the next day at Empress Foods and Lucerne Foods, company house brands. Safeway retail outlets closed soon after because of a lack of supplies.

FORD BRINGING OUT 3-CYLINDER MOTOR

DETROIT (UPI)—The Ford Motor Co. announced plans today to introduce within the next two years a six-cylinder engine that can switch to three-cylinder operation to save fuel.

Ford president Lee Iacocca said a fuel savings of about 10 per cent can be expected from the new power plant. He said the engine will be used initially on some Ford trucks within the next 24 months.

The electronically controlled power plant is called the "dual-displacement engine" because it can operate on either six or three cylinders.

The heart of the system is an electronic control module that deactivates half of the engine's cylinders when the vehicle is cruising at highway speeds of approximately 45 miles per hour, or when it is decelerating down to the 25 m.p.h. range.

The module then reactivates the idle cylinders when they are needed for additional power.

Iacocca said preliminary testing indicates the principle can be applied to large and small engines, V-8s as well as sixes.

School Board Uses Computer To Track Down $2.2M Surplus

Greater Victoria taxpayers can thank a computer at Simon Fraser University in Burnaby for a $2.2 million saving in the 1976 school budget.

District 61 administrative staff worked throughout the summer—several of them called in from holidays—to try and find surpluses in the record $50 million budget approved early last year.

Using a computerized system called Program Oriented Budgeting and Accounting System (POBAS), administrators managed to find $2.2 million that had been budgeted but would not be needed.

The surplus was discovered because the staff was able to make accurate forecasts of real spending as opposed to estimating the funds the district will need for the next year.

Trustees were told such a forecast would not have been available last year (pre-POBAS). The computer was largely responsible for the quick, accurate spending figures.

The district has a terminal at its offices on Foul Bay Road hooked to the main computer at SFU.

Meanwhile, a special board meeting will be called later this month to calculate a formula to set the 1977 budget months earlier than in previous years. The formula will be based on the cost of educating each pupil.

The $2.2 million surplus also became a political issue at Monday's meeting.

Trustee hopeful Bud Smith asked the board if it could make a "mistake" of $2.2 million where other savings could be made.

Smith documented a number of examples where the district had over-budgeted anywhere from 15 to 75 per cent.

Trustee Mark Fisher called Smith's speech a "wonderful push forward in the political arena," but said the figures had to be put into perspective.

"Everything you say in isolation is a stinging critique, but in relationship with the entire process of being a trustee... school planning, teacher hiring, etc., it marks only a small facet of the responsibilities on the shoulders of the trustees."

Cyclist Drowned Coroner Reports

Twelve-year-old Judy Sharpley of 475 Ker died accidentally by drowning Friday night after a bicycle she was riding plunged over an embankment into the Gorge near Tillicum, coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre has ruled.

St. Jorre, in an inquiry report filed Monday, said there were indications the Sharpley girl and a friend, Carolyn Harney of 375 Vincent were both riding on the bicycle at the time.

He said it was apparent the Sharpley girl hit her head in the fall and drowned. The other girl was also knocked unconscious but landed on rocks above the waterline. She is recovering in Victoria General Hospital.

In another inquiry, St. Jorre has determined the death of Gary Swan, 25, of Portofino, New Zealand, was suicide.

Swan died Sunday four days after he poured gasoline over his body and set it alight in Beaver Lake Park.

Saanich police said Swan was distraught over a love affair.

Car Fire Laid To Welder

A car fire at Midas Muffler Shop, 2445 Douglas, produced a lot of smoke today but damage was estimated at under $300.

A spokesman for the shop said welding of a muffler under a car set paper and other material under the back seat to smouldering.

The problem arose when crew could not get the back seat out of the car, he said. Smoke damaged the interior and rear window.

Consumer Spending Key

those at similar stages of past economic cycles.

"There is little evidence at the present to suggest a strong resurgence in consumption expenditures," the board says, adding that consumers do not now have an optimistic outlook.

Real disposable income, which is the main determinant of consumer spending, is forecast by the board to rise by six per cent this year and by 4.5 per cent in 1977. Growth in total output should be five per cent this year, dropping to 4.5 per cent in 1977.

The board forecasts no real growth in business spending on plant and equipment this year and a modest rise of 2.5 per cent in 1977.

The forecast describes recent moderation in consumer price increases as encouraging and the outlook is good for a "significant" improvement in price performance from the experience of recent years. The 12-month rise in prices in August was 6.2 per cent, the lowest in 3½ years.

Although the board did not comment of political ramifications, its projections clearly point to a difficult task for the federal government in convincing Canadians its restraint programs are working.

The board says that "labor markets will continue to be soft and unemployment rate will increase gradually, reaching a peak of 7.5 per cent in 1977. Finance Minister Donald Macdonald, in his May budget, aimed at a declining unemployment rate over the following year.

the weather

Sunny skies prevailed over most of B.C. yesterday under the influence of a ridge of high pressure. This morning, fog was reported at a number of coastal localities, particularly off the west coast of Vancouver Island. As the ridge of high pressure slips gradually eastward, a band of weather moving over Washington brings a chance of a thundershower over the extreme southern portions of B.C. today. At the same time a frontal system from the Pacific is causing increasing cloudiness today on the North Coast followed by rain. This weather will move gradually southeast today and Wednesday. Skies will remain mostly sunny today over the Interior.

Sask. A-G Indicts Cougar

SASKATOON (CP) — Saskatchewan Attorney-General Roy Romanow said Monday he has signed a direct indictment against Greg Tebbutt of the Victoria Cougars hockey club on an assault charge.

Tebbutt and two other players were charged following a violent incident Feb. 20 at the Saskatoon arena during a Western Canada Hockey League game between the Cougars and Saskatoon Blades.

Tebbutt was discharged due to lack of evidence at a preliminary hearing June 22.

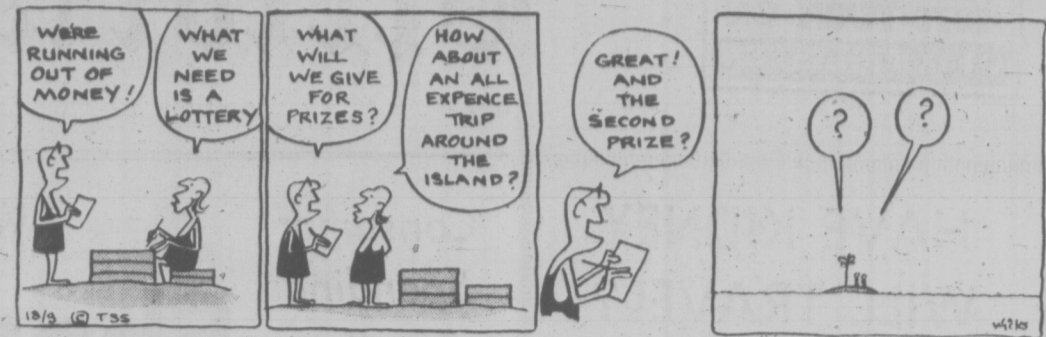

T. D. Caldwell, the attorney-general's Saskatoon agent, said the direct indictment would open the way to bring Tebbutt directly to trial should the Crown decide there is sufficient evidence. But he stressed that no decision on whether Tebbutt will actually stand trial has been made.

Explosives Stockpiling Discounted

EDMONTON (CP) — The RCMP has no evidence explosives or arms are being stockpiled by militant Indians in the Northwest Territories, a police spokesman said Monday.

threats against AIB decisions developed.

In northern B.C. a strike by Brotherhood of Maintenance Way employees against B.C. Railway continued today. Picketing began Monday in Prince George and spread to Quesnel, Mackenzie and Fort St. James during the day.

Company spokesman Hugh Armstrong said Monday trains were still leaving the North Vancouver terminal, but nothing was moving out of Prince George.

In Winnipeg, St. Boniface General Hospital service workers have voted 95 per cent in favor of strike action unless an Anti-Inflation Board rollback of their wage, settlement is rescinded.

The 1,100 members of the institutional employees union had their recently-negotiated 14-per-cent wage increases rolled back to eight per cent by the board.

In Estevan, Sask., coal miners employed by the Min-alta Coal Company are planning strike action after a ruling from the AIB.

The board ordered the 34 miners, members of the Saskatchewan Strip Miners Association, to repay part of the wages they received over the last year and take a pay cut next year in the second year of a two-year contract.

Back in Vancouver, Jean-Luc Pepin, chairman of the AIB, says he doesn't know where a Canada Labor Relations Board ruling on the AIB is leading.

Pepin was commenting on a ruling, released Friday, which found that a rollback of wage increases negotiated between the Cyprus Anvil mine in Faro, Yukon, and two locals of the United Steelworkers of America invalidated the contract. The labor board said a strike by the unions following the rollback was legal.

Mr. Pepin said in an interview that the ruling is impractical, and "I don't see the use... if the name of the game is to create trouble, all right, but if the name of the game is to get results, I don't see where it's leading."

Also in Vancouver, federal Labor Minister John Munro said the federal government and organized labor will be talking again when the Oct. 14 protest is over.

Munro said in an interview he also sees a role for labor in the post-controls era.

He said Oct. 4 could be a "catalytic element" that will start government, business and labor really talking to each other and the government can respond with a form of "involvement for labor that it can accept."

At the other end of the spectrum, a top business representative said the controls discriminated against business and amounted to "legislative overkill" and a "massive and sweeping" curtailment of freedoms.

Gerald Pearson of Edmonton, president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, said in Vancouver the entire question of chamber support for the controls program would be reviewed at its annual meeting in Montreal next month.

Pearson also said controls had "greatly aggravated" the problem of investment capital and warned that Canada may not be able to find up to $850 billion needed as investment money in the next 10 years unless the business world is assured of adequate after-tax profits.

PANAMA ARMY CLUBS STUDENTS

PANAMA CITY (WP) — National guardsmen used teargas and clubs to break up an anti-government demonstration by Panamanian University students Monday, arresting about 50 persons.

The noon disturbance, which involved about 250 persons, opened the second week of unrest here over several issues that Panamanian officials have blamed on the United States.

Three persons, two of them American citizens, remain under arrest in connection with downtown looting and rioting last Wednesday. The Panamanian government has said that the Americans, both 18, are military intelligence officers. Monday's violence erupted

Plane Crash Language Mixup Worries Controllers, Pilots

By DAN POTTIER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — It would be very difficult to prove claims that a language mixup was the sole cause of a recent air crash in Yugoslavia, according to spokesmen for Canadian pilots and air traffic controllers.

Little could be said about the Sept. 10 crash which took 176 lives until all the facts were known, they added.

This was the cautious reaction of the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association (CATCA) and the Canadian Air Line Pilots Association (CALPA) to press reports that language was the cause of the crash.

CATCA President Jim Livingston said in an interview yesterday it would take an official investigation to show the cause of the crash — something which could take up to two years.

"However," he said, "if it were true it would illustrate what we have been saying for the last 18 months. But we don't know if it is true."

CATCA and CALPA have argued strongly against federal plans to expand bilingualism in Quebec airspace, saying the use of more than one language in the air endangers safety.

A CALPA spokesman said "we must await an official investigation before making any comment on this matter."

It was important to be "very careful" about comments on air crashes.

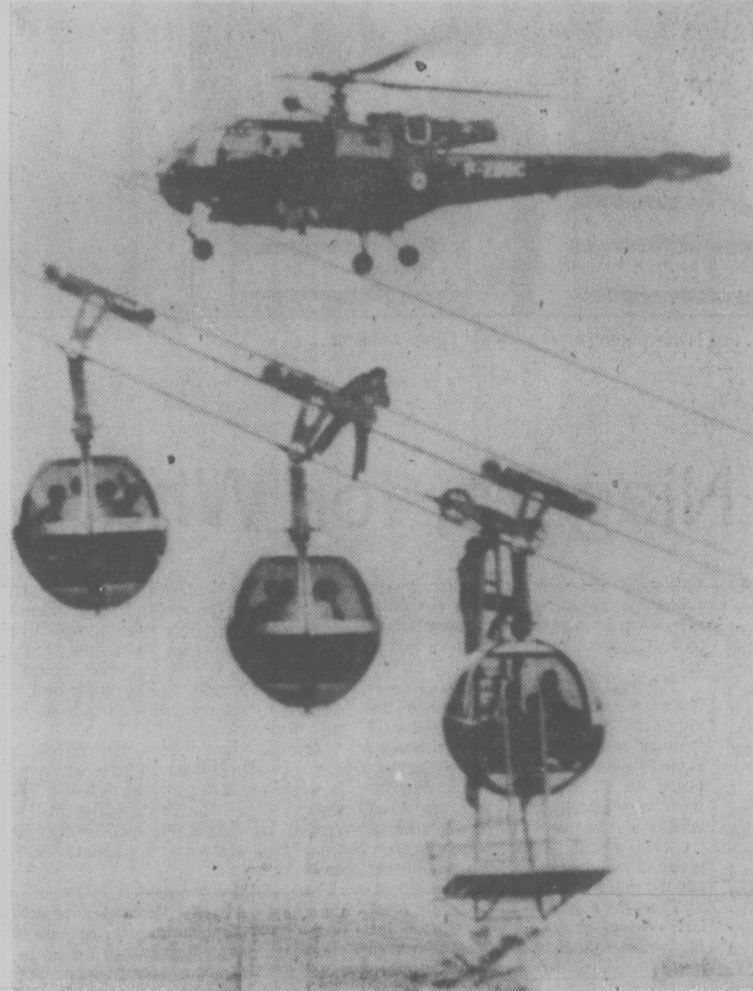

The London Daily Express said Saturday that a radio message could have prevented the mid-air collision between a British and a Yugoslav plane, but it was in Serbo-Croatian instead of English.

The newspaper said the British pilot did not understand a message in Serbo-Croatian from the Zagreb control tower which directed the Yugoslav plane into his path.

A spokesman for Transport Minister Otto Lang said there would be no government comment on the crash or on the report of a language mixup until Yugoslav authorities completed their investigation.

Livingston and the CALPA spokesman indicated that because of the lack of certainty about causes, the Yugoslav crash was unlikely to be used as part of their campaign against air bilingualism.

However, they said some individual pilots and controllers had reacted strongly to reports that a language mixup caused the crash.

Support N-Plants —Teller

Hydrogen bomb developer Edward Teller said Monday proposed nuclear electric plants for B.C. deserve support.

He said nuclear power sources are safe, are needed to forestall unemployment, and that furthermore, the Canadian Candu reactor is the best of its kind.

About 200 persons attended a public lecture at MacLaurin auditorium, a University of Victoria to hear the renowned physicist whose work at Livermore, Calif., in the early 1950's led to the first hydrogen bomb.

He told the mostly student audience nuclear power is the cheapest and most plentiful source available.

But it faces "violent objections" for what he called "reasons that might be clear to a psychologist." As far as he is concerned, Teller said, the goal of the first nuclear safeguard committee has been achieved — no health accidents attributable to the developing power source.

Teller said consumer advocate Ralph Nader "knows nothing about nuclear energy," but with the help of the press had mounted a North American anti-nuclear campaign.

Labor Shuns Trudeau Tour

by IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

CHARLOTTETOWN — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau made a shaky start on his five-day tour of Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick Monday when P.E.I. labor literally turned its back on him.

Farmers and businessmen who met him for private meetings were courteous while expressing criticism of some of his policies, but labor representatives rudely rejected a personal invitation from him to discuss the government's controls program.

And while the prime minister was closeted in his motel room Monday morning, several Charlottetown residents called a local radio open line show to heap abuse on him.

Trudeau indicated he was concerned about his reception here on the first leg of a series of tours across Canada which are designed to combat the declining popularity of his government and the Liberal party.

And on Monday night members of his party on the Island were given the opportunity at a reception to express their concern directly to the prime minister.

A local radio open line host, incensed at Trudeau's refusal to appear on his show, invited listeners to express their views about the prime minister and his policies. The calls were heavily weighted against Trudeau and criticism was strongest against the wage and price controls program and bilingualism.

One caller advised the prime minister to turn right around and go back to Ottawa.

Trudeau heard about the program and it was raised later in his discussions with representatives of farm groups in Sherwood.

One elderly farmer, it was reported later, told Trudeau not to worry about being unpopular and to continue to develop policies to benefit the country. He suggested it would be better for Trudeau to be a good prime minister even if he were defeated in the next election.

It was not clear whether the prime minister agreed.

When he arrived with P.E.I. Premier Alex Campbell for a pre-arranged meeting with business and labor leaders in Meadowbank later in the day, he was confronted by about a dozen labor representatives picketing outside.

The Island's federation of labor had already announced that it would boycott the meeting which it felt was merely designed to provide Trudeau with a forum to push his controls policy.

The prime minister jumped from his car and invited the picketers to come into the meeting but Bob Crockett, vice-president of the federation, refused.

Crockett said that when the prime minister accused him of damaging the democratic process by the labor boycott, he replied that Trudeau had already damaged it by campaigning against controls in the 1974 election and bringing them in after his victory at the polls.

He said he did not hear the prime minister's reply to this because he turned his back and walked away.

Lebanon Battles Dash Peace Hope

Times News Services

BEIRUT — Heavy fighting across Beirut and the central mountains today dashed hopes for a peaceful turnover of power to president-elect Elias Sarkis, due to take office in two days.

Pierce house-to-house fighting was reported by both sides today in the southern suburbs in what one leftist militia commander called "some of the worst fighting I've ever seen in the area."

At least 111 persons were killed in fighting since Monday, militia officials reported.

The escalating violence raised doubts over whether Parliament will be able to meet Thursday to swear in the new president.

A leftist broadcast said right-wing militia launched a tank attack on the suburb of Chah east of Beirut at daybreak but were driven back "suffering a great number of casualties."

The right-wing Phalangist radio said that in the mountain battles alone, 17 leftists were killed and many more wounded.

According to most accounts the fighting erupted when Christian Phalangist party militiamen attempted to seize a radio station controlled by the more militant followers of lame-duck President Suleiman Franjeh at Amsheet, 25 miles north of Beirut.

In Beirut, rightists and leftists traded mortar, rocket and machine-gun fire across the "green line" between the eastern and western sectors where Arab League peace-keeping troops have consistently failed to establish a buffer zone.

As the fighting increased again, Syria renewed its threat to unleash its army on the leftist Lebanese Moslems and their Palestinian allies.

The Syrian government radio said "Palestinian chief Yasser Arafat and Lebanese socialist leader Kamal Jumblatt 'are mainly to blame.'"

Had Look of Lust, Carter Says

JOHNSTOWN, Pa. — Jimmy Carter grinned and shrugged off an interview with Playboy magazine in which he is quoted as saying he had looked at lots of women with lust, and committed adultery many times — but only in his imagination.

The Democratic presidential candidate strolled through a campaign train in his shirt-sleeves Monday and told reporters he was not worried about the frank sex-and-sin comments to be published in the November issue of the magazine.

When excerpts of the candid interview circulated among hundreds of journalists aboard the Carter campaign train between New York and Pittsburgh, the former Georgia governor flashed a smile, said he had not read the article and added: "I'm not concerned about it."

In the interview, conducted over a three-month period, he is quoted as saying:

"Christ says, don't consider yourself better than someone else because one guy screws a whole bunch of women while the other guy is loyal to his wife."

"I've looked on a lot of women with lust. I've committed adultery in my heart many times. This is something that God recognizes. I will do — and I have done — and God forgives me for it. But that doesn't mean that I condemn someone who not only looks on a woman with lust but who leaves his wife and shacks up with somebody out of wedlock," it says.

"I don't remember saying those things. I haven't read it," Carter said in a brief interview on his campaign train in Pennsylvania. "I don't know. I don't remember."

But shortly afterwards, members of his staff distributed copies of the last page of the Playboy article containing the above quotes, and Press Secretary Jody Powell said he remembers the interview, which was taped.

Cash — and Volunteers

All of the 24 participating agencies in the current United Way campaign probably have an urgent requirement for your generous donations, but one of them is in particular need of something more — volunteers.

The Victoria branch of the Canadian Mental Health Association, in its own quiet description, "is a non-profit organization comprised of staff and volunteers who are attempting to provide services to the Greater Victoria area in the field of mental health."

Behind that calm language is a busy and over-burdened administration which runs a social and recreation centre, a small furniture factory, a short-term boarding home for 10 people, a program that brings together elderly residents of boarding homes and extended care hospitals for socializing and recreation and other activities.

It helps directly and indirectly hundreds of people a year. (It's estimated that one in 10 persons sometime in his life needs help or treatment for a mental problem.) Mainly, the CMHA helps those just out of hospital but "who aren't able yet to pick up the routine of their lives," in the words of Victoria director and social worker Marie McGrath.

Its work is directed towards "getting a person more self-confident and competent — with some it's a very slow process, with others it doesn't take long."

Since the late 1960s the trend in the mental health field has been to phase out the large institutions — there won't be any more Riverviews or Eric Martin Institutes built — since they only appeared to contribute to a revolving door syndrome. Someone went in, appeared to improve, was released into the community without any follow-up support and as a result usually found his way back inside again.

Enter the CMHA with its range of services. More and more responsibilities have been heaped at its door, but without a similar increase in grants. Some might say the province is taking advantage of the CMHA, a non-profit and mostly volunteer organization. By rights, since it provides a service every bit as vital and necessary to the community as EMI, it should get the same kind of funding. Its small nucleus of paid staff should not have to work for little more than the minimum wage.

Last year it ended with a deficit of $6,000 on a total budget of $197,000 (half of that a provincial grant). This year its deficit will probably double. "Funding is limited," says Ms. McGrath, with considerable understatement.

The CMHA could scream and protest, but considering the present climate of cutback and pennypinching that would not produce much except a lot of publicity. And the CMHA seems to be an organization that puts its service to people above all else. Don't misunderstand — they need your dollars. But they also need another kind of help, which only volunteers can supply.

As CMHA local president Don Knowles put it in the branch's 1975 report: "The continuing growth of the branch's programs reflects the loving care provided by staff members. As a former employee of a private agency who left because of long hours and limited remuneration and recognition, I am particularly sensitive to the strength of dedication shown by those who continue."

"There is a pressing need to provide a community-support system for those who are lonely, frustrated, or interested in attaining a more meaningful, involved life."

If you think you can help, give them a call, as well as a cheque to the United Appeal.

Saving Niagara, for What?

TORONTO — One of the curious features of the save-the-farmland movement in Ontario is that it has focused almost hysterically on the fruitlands of the Niagara peninsula. For the land-savers and other futurologists, Niagara has become the battle which must be won if the war is not to be lost, the Jerusalem which must be captured if the great crusade to keep the holy land from the urban infidels is not to fail.

Understandably, there is a mystique about the Niagara fruitlands which helps the good earth people political. A unique combination of soil, climate, and topography makes about one-fifth of the peninsula particularly suited for the growing of grapes and tender fruits. Niagara produces 80 per cent of the grapes grown in Canada, 55 per cent of the cherries, 75 per cent of the peaches. It is, to use a popular description, a "precious resource" and a "priceless heritage."

Unfortunately, priceless heritages can also be costly white elephants and Niagara is not the good fighting ground the land-savers would like it to be. There is, of course, a strong argument to be made for preserving good agricultural land from urbanization, in order that future generations have an adequate food supply, but saving Niagara is an uncertain trumpet for the cause.

In the first place, there is not all that much left, in the case of tender fruits, to be saved. Originally, there were some 38,000 acres suitable for fruit orchards but urban development, lacking a provincial land policy, has taken its toll and now there are only 18,000 to 23,500 acres (it is difficult to get figures everybody accepts) left.

It is very questionable whether this is enough to support a viable industry against foreign competition. It's great during the short-lived fresh fruit season to have Niagara peaches, cherries, pears, plums and apples available but what keeps the industry going is the processing side of the crop and here the Niagara growers and canners can easily be undersold by the California and Georgia imports. Tariff protection, resulting in higher consumer prices appear to be the only answer but the federal government has been reluctant to act.

The real Achilles heel of the save-Niagara crusade, however, are the vineyards. Some 54 per cent of the total fruitland is devoted to growing grapes and some 70 per cent of the grape crop is shipped to the wineries. Without the wineries there would be no grape production and without the vineyards there would be no fruit belt worth talking about, since the grape land is only so-so for tender fruits and not much good for other crops either.

Thus, the argument that Niagara must be saved to produce essential food for future generations really comes down, in large measure, to saying that future generations must have Ontario wine, which somehow is not quite so compelling. Not only is the teetotal vote lost right there, but the connoisseur vote as well, since to put it bluntly, the labrusca grape so favored by Niagara's soil and climate makes lousy wine.

At one time this didn't much matter, since most of the Niagara crop went into passable sherries and "fortified" ports and dessert wines, the later priced and aimed clearly at drinkers for whom taste, shall we say, was the least consideration.

As Canadian tastes for table wines have developed, however, Niagara growers have been feverishly ripping out their labrusca vines and replanting with imported vinifera varieties and vinifera hybrids, and while the wine from these still leaves a great deal to be desired for the most part, some of it has found a good market and even the approval of connoisseurs.

In any event, the Niagara grape crop (and presumably the acreage, although that figure is not available) has been steadily increasing over the years and one cannot seriously say the vineyards are being paved over by urbanization. Indeed, last year's crop was too much for the wineries to take and the government, in one of the grosser vote bribes of the 1975 Ontario election, paid out $9 million for the surplus.

There remains, however, the problem of price — the Niagara grape growers and wineries, like the tender fruit producers and processors, are not competitive against imports, even though the Liquor Control Board of Ontario, which controls the price, currently marks up the cost of imports by 108 cent but Ontario wines by only 67 per cent.

One can currently buy, for example, a very passable Hungarian table wine, red or white, for $2.65 per 35-ounce bottle. The Ontario wine industry estimates that to produce a comparable quality of wine from Niagara, it would lose about 15 cents on every gallon.

No doubt it was considerations such as these that led the hard-headed councillors of the regional government of Niagara to vote unanimously last month for an official plan which would assign yet another 7,500 fruit land acres to urban development. The decision over-rode the recommendations of the council's own planners, has outraged the preservationists, and has made life difficult for the provincial government, which is now under tremendous political pressure to veto the municipal plan.

Reducing Markup

The situation is tailor-made for the lobbyists and all the signs are that the government will veto. To submissions from the Ontario Wine Council, the government has now agreed to reduce its markup on Ontario wines from 67 cent to 46 per cent for table wines and to 60 per cent for fortified wines, on condition that 80 per cent of the reductions be passed on to consumers and the balance used to improve the industry's marketing and advertising techniques. This will cost the public treasury $5 million next year.

It has also decided to allow blending of imported and domestic wines to improve the domestic quality. It will permit the wineries to open more stores and to sell wine-related merchandise (but not food). It will take various other steps to promote the sale of Ontario wine both domestically and, hopefully, abroad.

It is all being done, of course, to save the Niagara fruit land from the asphalters. One can only wonder why.

FRANK RUTTER

The Carter-Ford Big Show

WASHINGTON — The 1960 presidential election was probably decided on the night of Sept. 26 when 85 million people saw the sweat start to dribble beneath Richard Nixon's lower lip.

It was the first of the "great debates" between Nixon, then vice-president, and John F. Kennedy.

On Thursday, President Gerald Ford and challenger Jimmy Carter will meet in a Philadelphia theatre for the first of their live broadcast debates.

It could be the decisive moment in the 1976 presidential campaign. The stakes, for a number of reasons, are very high in an election that is beginning to look much closer than anyone thought, or than the polls have yet shown.

So close was the 1960 contest with Nixon slightly ahead in polls taken before the debates that Kennedy's whisker victory on election night may be attributed as much or more to the television cameras as to the suspected dumping of votes into the Chicago River, by Mayor Richard Daley's political machine.

The importance of whiskers was recalled by Nixon in his book, Six Crises: "What ought to be decisive in selecting a president is what is in a man's head rather than the type of beard he may have on his face."

It was a bitter recollection, because he never overcame the unflattering image the camera depicted in that first debate — his dark beard, perspiring face, shifty eyes and his slightly smug smiler.

Reruns of the 1960 debates, confirm that Nixon lost to Kennedy on image, even though he actually won the first debate in terms of sheer debating skill.

Beard and Sweat

In the subsequent debates, Nixon, sometimes flustered, did not do so well in the give and take, either, but the audience was smaller (it fell off 20 million after the first encounter) and the damage was done.

The medium has changed since 1960. For one thing, most viewers on Thursday will see the candidates in color, which adds an impressive dimension of realism. And more people today get their news from television, which registers instant impressions — and images — that newspapers cannot match.

The audience Thursday will probably be more than 100 million and the first impressions will be the most lasting for the most people.

Both candidates have a high risk at stake, but Carter's is probably the greatest.

More people "knew" Ford, who has the advantage of incumbency, and has been 3-0 on television. They also know his foibles and his failings. If Ford does badly in the debates, his image is not going to change very much. But if he does well, the pleasant surprise could do wonders in the polls.

So far in the campaign, the president has not attempted to go out into the country to prove anything. Instead, he has tried to prove by staying in the White House that he is doing his job and that he can handle the presidency.

His few public appearances have been carefully staged and well rehearsed. He has relied heavily on the virtuoso performance he gave in his acceptance speech at the Republican nominating convention, using clips of it for his campaign commercials.

Carter is much less of known quantity. He became well known to the Democratic party constituency during his primary campaign, but only superficially to the electorate as a whole.

JIMMY CARTER
...even a tie will be good able to stand up to the vice-president and to appear knowledgeable with more limited resources was very significant in establishing an image of trust and capability.

Carter claims that a tie with Ford would mean victory. "He's been in Washington 27 years and to the extent that I come out equal to him in my apparent knowledge of issues, I think again that would be equivalent to a victory for me."

Ford is not known for his ability to think quickly in the cut and thrust of debate, despite his years in congress. But he is improving and gained confidence when he won the Republican nomination.

Not many people have seen Carter in debate. But he did participate in some during the primaries. He tended to make speeches rather than give answers and occasionally appeared to be dumfounded by an unexpected thrust from an opponent.

Ford's aides at the White House have been screening some of these debates during their preparation for Thursday. But generally, their impression of Carter has been favorable.

"He talked for about five minutes on the economy and it was very effective," commented Mike Duval, one of Ford's special team on the debates. "It was like a cassette recorded in his head."

In fact, if the issue is one with which he is familiar, Carter can deliver a faultless, memorized spiel, as reporters covering his primary campaign can testify. It is his reaction to the unfamiliar that bears watching.

Like Ford, Carter will come to the Walnut Theatre — said to be the oldest theater in continuous use in the English-speaking world — well briefed and carefully prepared. But perhaps not as well, because he has been campaigning around the country since his nomination while Ford stayed home and boned up.

How the candidates respond on specific issues will depend on the structure of the debates.

Organized by the League of Women Voters, a non-partisan group with a respected record in public affairs, the first debate will last 90 minutes, starting at 9:30 p.m. eastern time.

Unlike the Kennedy-Nixon debates, there will be no opening statement. Unlike free debates, the format will be highly structured with questions asked by a panel of journalists. Each candidate will be allowed three minutes to answer a question, with two more minutes to answer a follow-up and two minutes rebuttal time for his opponent. Each candidate will be allowed three minutes to make a closing statement.

The first debate will be on domestic issues, as was the first one in 1960. This is slightly to Carter's advantage, because it is territory with which he is more familiar and it allows wide latitude for criticism of existing government programs, the economy and unemployment. These issues rank highest in voter interest.

Tape Recorder

The format suggests that what we will see is not really a debate at all, but a rather formal question and answer session like some of those Sunday morning panel shows. Meet the Press and Face the Nation.

If the other proposed debates come off, they will be held on Oct. 6, about foreign policy, and on Oct. 22, a free-for-all.

The vice-presidential candidates, Republican Robert Dole and Democrat Walter Mondale, would go at it in a debate on Oct. 11.

Whether these will take place will depend on how well the first debate goes and also on the outcome of legal challenges by third party candidates who are not included.

But a lot more depends on Thursday's debate.

There are doubts about Ford's grasp of the presidency. There are doubts about Carter's position on issues. This is the first time the two have been set up in direct confrontation.

The viewers will judge them, not only by what they say, but how they say it.

Besides all this, there is evidence that the electorate itself is very fluid. The number of independents and undecided voters is unusually high this year. Some polls suggest that the turnout of voters on Nov. 2 will be very low, perhaps below 50 per cent. This is not just the fault of the candidates but of a system of government which has become discredited and tarnished by scandal, corruption, waste and mismanagement.

The debates, particularly the first one, may decide not only who is elected but how many people are stimulated enough to participate in the election.

Confusing Cash

Like many other people, I find it quite difficult to tell the difference between Canadian $1 and $20 bills, now that we have given up our traditional custom, shared by the rest of the world except the United States, of having distinctive colors for distinctive denominations.

I recently complained of this to the minister of finance, the honorable Donald S. Macdonald. In a reply, he said, "I think that the public has become more accustomed to the new design." If that is so, so be it.

If, however, anyone else finds it irritating to have the colors of the different denominations so close to one another, I urge you to write to the minister, so that when we have a new issue of bills we may return to different colored ones. — R. J. Baker, Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island.

Wages and Profits

John Walters (Hardship in B.C. Is Crying Home the Loot, Sept. 16) in my opinion should stick to forestry research. I think he should accompany a housewife to the foodstores for a period of one month to see not only what her costs are but, more important, what she is buying these days. The statement that housewives bought more at grocery stores is confusing. It could be larger purchases in terms of dollars and cents or larger purchases in terms of actual items bought. As for electricity, did the rate not go up again in 1976? Ditto the telephone? Not to mention postal rates, contributions to medical services plans, air fares, ferry fares (in terms of our daily lives and not vacations)? Have dentists increased their fees lately (for those of us unfortunate enough not to have dental plans)? What about the cost of new lenses and frames for eyeglasses? Parking at a medical building was increased this year by 150 per cent (something the alleged 129 per cent increase gained by workers would not cover).

To be absolutely fair, should John Walters not have included a list of profits as well? We read in your newspaper not so long ago that General Foods, among others, had an excess profit of over $1 million. They must be crying in their beer, too! And the banks have not exactly been suffering.

I have monthly charge accounts, for one simple reason — I do not like to carry around all the loot that I accumulate each month. — B.C. Worker.

Old Museums

Have just read your editorial on old-style museums in the Sun of Sept. 16 and you've made my day.

For years I was a kindergarten teacher in Vancouver and one of the highlights of the year was our visit to the Vancouver Museum and the corner of Main and Hastings Streets. Well prepared, we knew exactly what to expect. And what treasures there were. The birds were a bit moth-eaten but most varieties were there. The rocks were a highlight. Where are they now? In boxes where no one ever sees their beauty? Then the skeleton with bones just like the ones each of us has inside of us. I could go on for pages, but why cry for the days that are no more. I'm retired now these 10 years but bring on your society for the preservation and conservation of old-style museums. I think it would go over with a bang.

We used to wind up our morning with lunch in Chinatown and a trip through the shops. What a happy day for small fry and what a day of education!

I seldom go to the new Vancouver Museum, there's always so much of it under construction! Why? — Kit Blais, New Westminster.

P.S. — I love the Victoria government museum.

The Children's Crusade Shakes Up South Africa

By STANLEY UYS
London Observer

CAPE TOWN — There is nothing in the history of decolonization in Africa to compare with the present revolt by black schoolchildren in South Africa. No liberation movement has had anything to match it.

This probably is the closest blacks in South Africa have come to revolution. If they had guns — which like everything else in South Africa, are reserved for whites only — this could easily become a kind of revolution, at least in the scattered areas where the ferocity of the outbursts have left whites shaken and bewildered. The revolt is worse even than the disturbances of the 1950s, or the widespread unrest in the Post-Sharpeville period in 1960. If it is not being generally recognized as such, it is because people have cried "wolf" too often and don't want to make the same mistake again. Two warnings have been given already that South Africa is approaching Civil War conditions: By the Zulu chief, Gatsha Buthelezi, and by an opposition front-bench member of Parliament, Japie Basson.

Since the police shootings in Johannesburg's Soweto township June 16, when 176 people died (the figure is more than 300 now), there has been a steady escalation of unrest, which has entered its fourth month and is still spreading.

Ominous Warning

Police resources are being seriously strained; and the police minister, Jimmy Kruger, has given the ominous warning now that there are just not enough police to protect white property. Businessmen, he says, must organize their own security forces — and this from a government that boasts about the size and efficiency of its security forces.

The police have exhausted all their familiar methods — warnings, tear gas, batons, dogs, guns — and still the young blacks emerge from their gutted townships to press home the struggle. The loss in lives and property has been enormous and hundreds have been injured and arrested, but instead of deterring the youngsters, it has simply prodded them to further action. Their recklessness comes partly from the arrogance and self-confidence of youth, but it also comes from a fatalistic acceptance that if they must die — so be it. This attitude horrifies their parents, but they brush aside all restraints and pleas to be cautious.

They even tell their parents to mind their own business, and then slip out of the house to discuss the plans for the next day.

Parents Derided

The astonishing thing about the children's revolt is the thoroughness with which it has taken over the initiative from the elders, and refused to share it. The attitude of the children toward their parents varies from impatience to derision. They are not cowed either by apartheid, like many of their parents, because they have known no other system all their lives, and because familiarity sometimes breeds contempt. These young blacks are the product completely of the apartheid system that the Afrikaner nationalists introduced in 1948, and they fear neither it nor the police who enforce it. They are out of the police's control; therefore their sheer numbers; too, are an important factor. Forty per cent of the people in Soweto, for example, are younger than 20, and 60 per cent are younger than 30. It will be pointless, therefore, for the government to offer concessions to the older, more moderate Africans! They are not the ones who are causing the unrest.

If the attitude of children to their parents encompasses both impatience and contempt, the attitude of parents extends from angry disapproval to complete sympathy. As a colored (mixed race) father expressed it:

"My emotions are pride, shame and fear! Pride that my children should be doing what I failed to do, shame that I was afraid to do it, and fear that one day or one night they will not come back alive."

There has been a discernible shift in parental attitudes in recent weeks towards more sympathy for the children — as the children have returned home with tear-gas red eyes, welts from police batons, and birdshot punctures from police shotgun fire.

"We want to do what our parents couldn't do," the black children say. They are astonishingly young to be taking on such a historic task. Most of them are African and colored pupils aged between 10 and 20, although one hears mind-boggling stories of the political awareness of 8-year-olds. They form a unity with students, aged 18-28, from the five segregated black universities, where the philosophy of black consciousness took shape.

It sounds improbable that an 8-year-old should be a young radical, but if he (or she) carries a placard in a demonstration, stones police vehicles, loots burning buildings, taunts police who are armed with automatic rifles, experiences tear gas, gives black power salutes and sings freedom songs — what further qualification is needed?

There is a puritanical streak in these youngsters, too. They have burned down innumerable bottle stores and beer halls, — to destroy the white man's liquor which has demoralized so many of their parents. They have looted burning stores and carted crates of liquor away to smash the bottles. A father who tried to stop his young son emptying a bottle of whisky in the veld was told: "They gave you whisky instead of freedom."

If anybody can claim credit for producing this generation of young radicals it is the government. It created the segregated conditions in which black consciousness was born, particularly the black universities. Disturbances have occurred at all these universities and two have been closed until next year. Many of their buildings are in ashes.

There is a difference between African nationalism, as South Africa has known it, and black consciousness, as the children know it. The earlier African nationalists were united by political solidarity at the top, and in many ways they sought to win acceptance into the existing power structure. The young blacks are united at all levels by their efforts to set up a countersystem. This explains why the police have grappled vainly to identify the "leaders" and why the struggle has been characterized by so few specific demands. It is the whole system the youngsters want to pull down.

This is the key to the element of anarchy in the children's revolt: It is a catharsis they're after.

The older generation of blacks know they are the last generation who will negotiate moderately with white.

T. J. Makhaya, Soweto's "Mayor" (whose house was nearly burnt down by young radicals), told the government commission of inquiry into the black unrest: "You are facing the last generation of blacks who are willing to negotiate. The younger generation, are calling us stupid fools because we achieve nothing. They say if we can't achieve our rights through dialogue we must take up spears and shields and meet in the field to sort out answers for this country."

Nimrod Mkele, director of the Institute of Black Studies in Johannesburg, said:

"The Urban Bantu Council is known as the Useless Boys Club. The homeland leaders dare not walk into Soweto. I'm not exaggerating. They dare not walk into Soweto, and that includes Gatsha Buthelezi. When he did go there, it was under police escort."

Myth Dispelled

The achievements of the black children's revolt in three months have been remarkable. The revolt has spread to almost every major centre of South Africa and to innumerable minor ones; it is transcending traditional hostilities and bringing African, colored and Indian youths together, it is dispelling finally the myth that coloreds and Indians, in the final count, will side with the whites rather than Africans; and it has radicalized the 23 million blacks (Africans, coloreds and Indians) in the most traumatic way possible, so that black-white relations, and black attitudes to white policies, will never be the same again.

The effect of the black children's revolt on whites has been no less profound. Before the revolt, and particularly after Prime Minister John Vorster's successful policy of détente in southern Africa, opposition whites had begun to drift toward the ruling Nationalist Party. Now they have reared back. There has been a massive loss of confidence among them in apartheid policies, and they are clamoring to present alternative white remedies.

Almost without exception, at least on the higher political, business and professional levels, they are calling for a national convention, similar to the one that founded the Union of South Africa in 1910, to draw up a new constitution for a multiracial South Africa.

Mysteries of Medicine

By MICHAEL HALBERSTAM

(Dr. Halberstam is a Washington, D.C. physician. He wrote this article for the New York Times)

Stumped. Baffled. Six weeks after a mysterious illness killed 26 persons associated with a Philadelphia American Legion convention, two more from a Roman Catholic meeting in the same city, and a 29th victim associated with neither event, the cause was no clearer than initially. The hordes of eager young field investigators loosed on the Pennsylvania countryside, the troops of epidemiologists, the phalanxes of sober pathologists—all have come to dead ends in their investigations of the epidemic which, itself, seems to have burned out spontaneously.

Nickel carbonyl, an industrial toxin few had ever heard of five weeks ago, has been prominently proposed as the cause of the disease, because nickel carbonyl produces similar symptoms—damage to the lungs and other organs, fevers, an incubation period of a few days. Tests by an expert on nickel poisoning at the University of Connecticut have shown high levels of nickel in tissue samples of disease victims. But there is still not the slightest indication how, or if, nickel carbonyl was present in Philadelphia when the legionnaires got sick. And many doctors continue to doubt that the nickel compound will ever be proven to have caused the epidemic.

Research on the illness continues. Microscope slides of pathologic tissue are being exchanged among various experts throughout the country, and plasma specimens are being re-examined. An answer may yet be found, but, in diseases of populations as in diseases of individuals, the longer after the initial "work-up" the cause remains unknown, the less likely it ever will be known.

The "Legion epidemic" epitomizes some of the frustrations of modern medicine. With all that is apparently known of disease there is still not the slightest clue to its cause. It is not even known if the epidemic was an infectious disease, much less whether it was an infective virus, much less which virus. At this point the epidemiologists studying it can merely mutter, "Maybe something in the air, maybe something in the water, maybe something in the food," and go back to their slides and chromatographs.

Assuming that there really was an epidemic with a common cause, as opposed to a bizarre coincidental upswing in the number of deaths that might be expected among any large group of men primarily in late middle age, we should not be too surprised if the agent is never identified. Disease detectives, like homicide detectives, have their share of unsolved cases.

The truth is that physicians and scientists know comparatively little about how the body functions, and not much more about how it malfunctions. The body is a constantly changing mosaic of hundreds of interrelated systems. Doctors proudly study one system at one moment in time and think they understand what's going on. They draw a blood specimen, come up with a low potassium value, and exclaim, "Hypokalemia! Just add more potassium to the diet and your symptoms will go away."

But what of the potassium value five minutes later, one hour later, six hours later? What of the potassium value at the moment it is drawn, related to the noradrenalin, the thyroid hormones, the acid-base balance, the GABA system, the myriad other cycles that are acting at the very minute the potassium is?

Seen from this perspective, the body has yielded only its surface secrets to modern investigators. In only a few symptom complexes can doctors manage to track simultaneously two or, at most, three significant systems, while they must assume that dozens are involved in the final common pathway which produces disease or discomfort.

True, for example, certain symptoms are caused by lack of potassium and, true, a blood sample can be taken, found low in potassium, potassium can be added to the diet or the intravenous, and can be "cured." Medicine needn't be too proud of itself. The ancient Romans knew that their recurrent fevers were caused by the bad air which rose from the River Tiber, and by moving to higher ground they escape the "malaria" just as surely as if they had known every detail of the life cycle of the Anopheles mosquito. It's quite possible that current knowledge of potassium depletion rests on just as shaky a ground.

Practicing physicians know that, while they can rarely explain the fleeting pains, sudden spasms, and transient numbness that afflict so many patients, bad disease, significant disease, usually makes itself known. Bad disease gets worse and eventually shows its hand, if only at the autopsy table. The common run of symptoms, on the other hand, comes, and goes perversely, with no pattern, no abnormal physical findings, and no characteristic laboratory abnormalities. Pressed for an explanation for "that funny numbness in the back of my throat," the doctor will admit that he or she doesn't know. This rarely suffices. The patient wants to know, has been told that he has a right to know. The doctor will then come up with an explanation, one usually based on whatever the hot topic in research is at the time — in the 1890's bacterial toxins (possibly from infected teeth), in the 1920's malpositioned body organs (the use of X-rays was expanding exponentially), in the 1930's hormonal imbalance, today antigen-antibody warfare. If plausible, an explanation makes both patient and doctor feel better.

As the causes of many common diseases are unknown, so have epidemics come and gone for no apparent reason. Epidemics similar to the Philadelphia outbreak have appeared in the past at a mental hospital in Washington, D.C. and at other convention sites. Cancer of the stomach, once a common malignancy, seems to be vanishing in the Western world. Some studies suggest that peptic ulcer is also on the decline. It's quite possible that some conditions will disappear before anyone finds out what caused them.

This is not to indicate despair at the state of modern medicine, only to recall how much mystery remains. Because of this, physicians will continue — to apply partially understood therapies to barely-understood illness. It is foolish for critics of medicine to puff up righteously about "unproven therapies." Very little in medicine is proven. Diagnosis and treatment move haltingly, ahead a few steps here, back a few there, into blind alleys often enough. Breakthroughs are rare, increments common. The practicing physician learns to live with this frustration, though not to enjoy it.

SOCIAL WORKERS ON PATROL

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police and social workers have combined forces to create special night patrols directed at quelling domestic disputes.

Vancouver Resource Board social workers will ride with police patrols on Friday and Saturday nights for three months.

In the past, when police found themselves involved in family disputes they referred the cases to social workers, usually the following day. Now social staff will be on hand at the outset of any family argument.

Norm Bron, VRB police liaison spokesman, said the first weekend patrols "went quite well".

"There were two teams on from 8 p.m. to 4 a.m., the peak hours for domestic squabbles," he said.

"It's pretty difficult to give counselling at the scene," he said. "What this does allow us to do is to set up counselling periods more quickly.

"Because of the pressures of police patrol, we wouldn't ordinarily hear about a case until one or two days after the police visit.

"The basic idea is to get to the problem as early as possible," he said.

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP)

Prisoners Andrew Bruce, Dwight Lucas and Claire Wilson appeared Monday in British Columbia Supreme Court on five charges resulting from a June, 1975, hostage-taking incident at the B.C. Penitentiary.

They were remanded to Nov. 1.

The prisoners, who appeared in shackles and leg irons, are charged with unlawful confinement, possession of a dangerous weapon, attempting to escape lawful custody, attempted extortion of transportation and theft.

Classification officer Mary Steinhauer, one of 15 hostages, was killed by a bullet fired by a member of the rescue squad.

Hydro Plans Dam Start Before Tackling Slide

REVELSTOKE (CP)

B.C. Hydro will have spent most of the $1.2 billion set for the Revelstoke dam before it has proof the controversial Downie Slide can be controlled, the Revelstoke dam hearing was told Monday.

Estimated cost of draining the two-mile-wide, two-billion-cubic-yard slide is $35 million.

Hydro will have to proceed with construction of the 500-foot-high, mile-wide dam even though it will not be assured the Downie Slide can be controlled, Dave Cathcart, supervisor of Hydro's development section, told the hearing.

He said that 10 miles of tunnels and 300,000 feet of drainage drillholes should be completed by summer, 1981. The dam is expected to be in operation by fall, 1982.

Galt Wilson, representing Revelstoke city, said that if stabilization of the slide is not assured, so much money will have been spent that Hydro will argue that the project should be completed anyway.

Cathcart replied that Hydro is convinced the drainage plan will work.

Bill Walker, Hydro's chief engineer, said that cost of the drainage system could exceed by many times the anticipated $35 million and the over-all project would still be economical.

Bill King (NDP-Revelstoke-Slocan) said that Hydro's application for a water licence should be withdrawn "until the necessary engineering work is done."

He said Hydro's panel of six consultants on the Downie Slide have refused to stake their reputations on the project until they have seen Hydro's engineering design, which don't be ready for three years.

Four CLRA Firms Ordered To Lock Out Employees

BARBECUE KILLS MAN

KAMLOOPS (CP) — William Shular, 56, of Edmonton died on the weekend when he apparently suffocated in his camper at Stake Lake about 20 miles south of this interior city.

RCMP said the victim had a barbecue burning inside the camper and he suffocated from the fumes.

Kamloops coroner Dr. John Wrench has ordered an inquiry into the incident.

Bargaining By Gov't Rapped

VANCOUVER (CP) — Government should refrain from taking sides in free collective bargaining, Ron Bone, registrar of the British Columbia Labor Relations Board said Monday.

He told the International Personnel Management Association that government intervention and free collective bargaining "are just not consistent."

"If free collective bargaining is going to survive, it can only do so if two parties can reach a settlement without government intervention."

"When it (collective bargaining) culminates in a strike, there may have been a deficiency in the parties' relationship, but I don't think government intervention will correct that deficiency."

Bone, one of six board vice-chairmen, declined to comment on the current province-wide survey seeking voters' reaction to right-to-work legislation, and said his comments were not aimed at the possibility of back-to-work legislation to end the B.C. construction industry shutdown.

Welfare Cost Cut Predicted

DELTA (CP) — Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm says British Columbia welfare costs will be greatly reduced this year because his department's policies have decreased the welfare rolls.

He said the exact amount saved will not be known until the province's next quarterly review is completed in three months.

Vander Zalm said in an interview that the number of welfare recipients in B.C. has decreased to 105,000 from 125,000 at the end of last year.

"The total number of people on welfare is the lowest in four years and it's still dropping," Vander Zalm told a Social Credit party audience here.

"Despite the increase (granted last month to some classes of recipients), the cost of welfare is dropping and we will be ahead by many millions of dollars at the end of this fiscal year. We don't know if it'll be $19 million or $25 million or $35 million or what," he said. "The numbers are dropping at a real rapid rate."

He said his department's job-finder program has placed 500 recipients in its first month of operation.

The program is expected to find jobs for another 1,000 recipients this month, said Vander Zalm.

He said that those placed in jobs are not the only ones being taken off the welfare rolls by the program.

In Penticton, the job placement officer sent six recipients to jobs one day, but only two reported for work, said Vander Zalm.

He said he told the job-finder: "Well, at least you got six people off welfare—if they don't report for a job, they obviously don't really need to be on welfare."

The program "will certainly separate those willing to work from those who are not," he said. However, the majority of those on welfare are eager to work.

"It's not a matter of large numbers of people refusing to work," said Vander Zalm.

What the anti-inflation program demands of the Government of Canada

What the anti-inflation program expects of each individual Canadian, it demands of the Government of Canada. The Government must act with restraint, cut as many costs as possible and limit its growth.

A policy of restraint

The federal government is strictly limiting growth in total spending and in the size of the public service. The rule of thumb is that the increase in government spending should not rise more quickly than the increase in the Gross National Product. In other words, government is not, as some people fear, going to take a bigger and bigger slice of the national pie.

Prices and incomes continue to rise, though now in a controlled way. The population grows. And so government spending has to go up too, just to provide the public services Canadians need and expect. Our policy is to keep up with demand, but not to spend in a way that would contribute to inflation.

Cost cutting and limits to growth

This year, one-and-a-half billion dollars have been cut from planned government spending. Some examples:

- ☐ The pay of MPs, Senators and senior public servants has been frozen. All other public service salaries are of course regulated by the Anti-Inflation Guidelines.
- ☐ Unemployment Insurance is being much more strictly regulated, to make it fairer and less expensive.
- ☐ Information Canada, the Company of Young Canadians and some other programs have been eliminated.

- ☐ Transportation and industrial subsidies were cut.

Also, growth in the number of public servants has been limited to 1.5%, much less than the growth in total employment. In most departments, this means a manpower freeze and in some cases, cutbacks, have been made. Many new programs have been postponed during this period of restraint too.

The essential services

The restraints of the anti-inflation program force everyone to evaluate what they can do within a limited budget. The Government of Canada has a number of things it must do.

Over two-thirds of federal spending is money that is collected by the government and distributed to individual Canadians and institutions to provide important social services and to strengthen different parts of the economy. These expenditures go to such things as welfare payments, family allowances, pensions, farm subsidies, interest on Canada Savings Bonds and crop insurance. Some of this money is transferred to the provinces, so that they can provide good medicare plans, hospital services, community colleges and universities.

Out of a budget of about $42 billion, roughly $10 billion goes to the provinces for provincial services. About $10 billion goes for family allowances, old age pensions and other social services. About $5 billion contributes to subsidies which help keep prices down on such things as fuel, transportation and some foods.

In fact, most government spending goes back to the people. It must continue, but it can and is being controlled.

Martian Rocks to Roll In Search for Life

Soviets See Cosmonauts On TV Clip

MOSCOW (UPI)—In a rare nationwide telecast from space, the Soviet Union's two Soyuz-22 cosmonauts Monday displayed the layout of the cramped space module that will carry them back to earth.

Mission commander, Col. Valery Bykovsky, 42, and civilian flight engineer Vladimir Aksekov, 41, entered their descent module earlier in the day in possible preparation for the final stage of their six-day earth orbiting journey.

The national evening television news, in a one-minute film segment, showed both men lying prone in the small module.

Soviet television gave no indication whether the transfer from the command module was actual preparation for a landing or just training.

PASADENA Calif. (UPI)—Earthmoving has become routine, for everything from freeways to fairways. Viking scientists at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory are opening a new field—Marsmoving.

The scientists are trying to determine how to move a rock on the surface of Mars to dig into the soil beneath it.

They reason the soil, shielded by a rock from the ultraviolet rays that bombard the planet's surface through its thin atmosphere, is more likely to harbor complex carbon molecules or other organic matter.

Members of the soil acquisition team were conferring with the organic chemistry team and engineers to come up with commands that will order Viking 2, the robot laboratory on the surface of Mars, to push or roll away a large rock, uncovering the soil beneath.

The work will have to be done by the motor of the lander's scoop arm.

"The motor can exert 30 pounds of pressure," project manager Jim Martin said Monday. It will be aided by the weak Martian gravity—only one third as strong as earth's—so we hope to roll over a pretty large rock," he said.

The organic chemistry experiment is important to enable scientists to judge the findings of Viking 1's biology experiments. Those tests gave surprising results, indicating the possible presence of micro-organisms, although scientists are cautiously ascribing the data to unfamiliar Martian chemistry, particularly in the absence of evidence of carbon molecules needed for life.

Scientists theorize that such molecules may not have survived in the exposed soil, but may be present beneath a rock.

Martin said if the rock-rolling experiment is successful, it may be used again to gather a soil sample for the biology instruments, but engineers would have to find a way to command the boom to move the rock and immediately scoop the soil.

Remote Controlled Claws To Grapple for Tomcat

WASHINGTON (WP)—The U.S. Navy will lower an unmanned, box-shaped vehicle with mechanical claws into the North Atlantic to search for the highly secret fighter plane that rolled off the carrier John F. Kennedy last week, it was learned Monday night.

The vehicle—called CURV III for cable-controlled underwater recovery vehicle—was flown from San Diego to Prestwick, Scotland, on Sunday. It will be shipped out to sea from Glasgow aboard the navy tug USS Shalaki.

The Shalaki—homeported in Little Creek, Va.—is already in Glasgow. Atlantic Fleet Headquarters in Norfolk issued only a sketchy statement on the recovery plan Monday, declining to identify the search vehicle.

Other sources, however, identified it as CURV III. It carries sonar for hunting sunken objects and two television cameras for showing its underwater surroundings to controllers aboard the mother ship.

The same type vehicle helped recover a hydrogen bomb from the Spanish fishing village of Palomares in 1966 and rescued a British P-38 III midjet submarine off Cork, Ireland, in 1973.

The navy statement gave no hint of when the Shalaki with CURV III aboard will sail from Glasgow to the spot in the North Atlantic where the F-14 Tomcat fighter sank in 1,890 feet.

Nor did the navy's statement give any estimate of how long it might take to find and recover the plane—if it proves recoverable. "The duration of the mission will depend on such factors as the type of bottom found at the site and weather conditions," the navy said.

The $14 million F-14 fighter—in many ways the most modern plane in the world—went out of control while warming up to take off from the Kennedy about 75 miles northwest of Scapa Flow, Scotland. The two crewmen escaped.

Soviet warships and spy ships were watching the Kennedy at the time. A Soviet cruiser kept circling the area, raising fears in the Pentagon that the Soviets might try to recover the sunken plane to offset their loss of a Mig-25 Foxbat that a defecting pilot recently flew to Japan.

CURV III can operate easily in the depths where the F-14 fighter went down. But nobody knows how far ocean currents carried the plane after it sank out of sight, nor whether it is still in one piece.

The F-14 carries much advanced and secret technology, including a computer and coding system that could compromise NATO military security as well as that of the United States.

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis should unfreeze farm land and do something about soaring servicing costs if he wants to keep the price of lots down, Victoria housing development spokesmen said Monday.

They were commenting on a statement by Curtis that the provincial government will control impost fees in hopes of keeping lot prices in line. Impost fees are charged by some municipalities to defray costs of trunk line water and sewer pipes and are in addition to the costs of servicing individual lots.

Mike Kipot, immediate past president of the local branch of Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada, said impost fees play only a small role in lot costs.

The main villains, he said, are the servicing costs and municipal regulations which hamper development.

Kipot said the average building lot on the Saanich peninsula is selling at $28,000, up 22 per cent from $23,000 one year ago.

Prime Gordon Head lots, have soared to $35,000 up 40 per cent from about $25,000 at this time last year.

"Lots could be serviced for $6,000 each in 1975. This year the price is at least $10,000 per lot. In addition, more and more municipalities are demanding underground wiring, and this is adding another $7,000 per lot," he said.

Control of impost fees, which range from nothing in the Colwood-Langford area to as high as $2,300 in some Lower Mainland areas, would be useful but failed to tackle the main issues, Kipot said.

There is a housing shortage, because municipalities discourage development, which, they believe, is a drain on municipal taxes, he said.

"Every time a lot is developed it will cost them money because the cost of servicing it is higher than the tax revenue from the property. All housing is subsidized. We should be prepared to subsidize housing so people can have a roof over their heads."

This funding should come from the provincial and federal government to a greater extent, he said. Senior governments should pay the full cost of trunk line water supplies and sewers.

On the local level, municipalities could reduce lot prices by easing their restrictions.

Kipot suggested lot sizes be reduced to a standard of 50 feet by 100 feet, instead of 60 to 65 by 120.

"You can build a very good three-bedroom home on a 50 by 100 foot lot, 5,000 square feet of land."

Home buyers should have the option of whether they want overhead or underground wiring. More expensive developments could have it underground but more modest subdivisions should have the option of cheaper overhead wiring.

Road widths need only be about 40 feet for dead-end roads but many municipalities insist upon a minimum of 66 feet, he said.

"We are ending up with gold-plated subdivisions. Municipalities are overreacting."

As an example, he said, a new subdivision in Northern Saanich is selling lots in the range of a minimum of $33,250 to a top price of $54,000.

"This is getting out of all reason. That is the price for the lot alone before a house is constructed."

Unless the provincial government played a stronger role it was unlikely the municipal councils would act because they are under tremendous pressure from community and environmental groups, especially in Saanich.

Ron Scattergood, a builder in the western area, said control of impost fees will do nothing for the Colwood-Langford area because there aren't any.

What the western region needs is more land that can be removed from the farm freeze and subdivided, he said.

Although the cost of servicing lots is small, in the range of $2,000 to $3,000, prices have soared in Colwood and Langford because of the land shortage and in sympathy with lot prices in Gordon Head and other areas.

He said building lots in the west are selling around $25,000, up 25 per cent from $20,000 one year ago.

The few people with raw land to sell have pushed the price up to about $60,000 per acre.

"It is a question of supply and demand. There is a shortage of land and those who have it are charging top dollar."

If more land were unfrozen and put on the market, the price would come down, Scattergood said.

Premier Bill Bennett can rest easy today.

That much-publicized attempt to move non-confidence in da preem just didn't materialize Monday night at the annual meeting of the Esquimalt Social Credit Association.

The fact it didn't, means (a) think before you write, (b) check your sources carefully.

We can hardly wait for a follow story charging that the alleged mover behind the "dump Bill" campaign was muzzled, leaned on, etc., but that might stretch what was a non-story too far.

Mind you, there are some journalists with pretty elastic principles around . . .

The movie musical David Copperfield will not go into production here until next spring due to the illness of producer Harold Greenberg.

He is expected to recover in time for the new schedule, which is to have songs recorded in Toronto in February and March and shooting of the film in Victoria in April, May and June. It was supposed to begin production this fall.

It was one of those little incidents that makes people-watching such an interesting pastime.

He was about 17, dressed in grubby casual clothes, and standing on his head on a little patch of grass beside the Oxford Village shopping centre. When the watchers at the bus stop saw him return to his feet after about 10 minutes and wander round the corner to the pastry shop, they thought the entertainment was over.

But the final scene came a minute later when he ran back to the patch of grass, dropped to his knees, and started picking up coins which had fallen from his pockets.

"Saanich Issues" will be aired on channel 10, starting Thursday, and it will be interesting to see how the municipality's elected officials react to a new format.

Last year, the program was in the hands of Mayor Ed Lam and some of the aldermen. The protest wasn't official, but we're informed that some aldermen objected to the constant exposure that seemed to be enjoyed by some of their "rivals" on council.

This year, the change of format brings in stockbroker Gerry Connor as a "neutral" moderator. Connor can be outspoken at times, enough to suggest that some of last year's objectors may wind up wishing they had last year's format.

The program runs from 9 to 10:30 p.m.

Valerie Seward, 26, a former Victorian, has been signed for the next Tommy Hunter Show series on CBC television. Daughter of Joan Smith and the late Erith Smith, Valerie has been managing a dinner theatre restaurant in Toronto for the past year. She will be one of eight O.K. Corral chorus members, singer-dancers on the show.

It isn't only children who have to learn English. Some adults should be at school, too.

Worst offenders are government employees who insist on talking and writing in jargon. Take, for example, Peter Grant, recreation consultant, leisure services branch, provincial secretary's department.

In a letter to "Mr. E. H. Hart, Municipal Clerk" of Oak Bay (Hart retired months ago), Grant informed council of a "special seminar" in Parksville which will be "conducted by a leading authority in recreation master planning" and which "will be of considerable value to your council."

"In these days of heavy financial pressure on the municipal budgets and increasing demand for recreational facilities, it is imperative that recreational needs be prioritized and decisions be made on solid quantitative information. Master planning is a tool designed to assist your council in making the right decisions."

A letter arrived at the Times last week from Toronto enclosing a map so a reporter could, if he wished, find his way to the open house festivities of an Ontario mine.

The letter could have used a map on the envelope as well.

The letter was addressed to the Victoria Times, Vancouver, B.C.

Someone in the Vancouver post office suggested "might be Victoria" which turned out to be a good guess.

Outside Workers Going Out

The city of Victoria's outside workers voted unanimously Monday night to support the Oct. 14 day of protest against wage controls, a spokesman said today.

The vote by members of Local 50 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees came just one week after CUPE inside workers (members of Local 388) voted overwhelmingly not to take part in the one-day strike by the Canadian Labor Congress.

Local 50 president Jim Walker, who had earlier denounced membership apathy and disinterest, stepped down and the meeting elected Bill Doherty as his successor.

Doherty, a fitter-mechanic in the waterworks section of the public works department, has been employed by the city since 1964.

$20,000 Jewel Theft

Victoria police are investigating the disappearance of a package containing more than $20,000 worth of jewelry destined for the Bay.

The jewelry—50 rings and four pairs of earrings—had been air-freighted over from The Bay in Vancouver and was being held at the Air West terminal at the Inner Harbor for pickup.

Police said a man wearing a brown suit and looking like a businessman walked into the office at 6:50 p.m. last Thursday, said his name was J. Whitaker and said he was to pick up a parcel for The Bay.

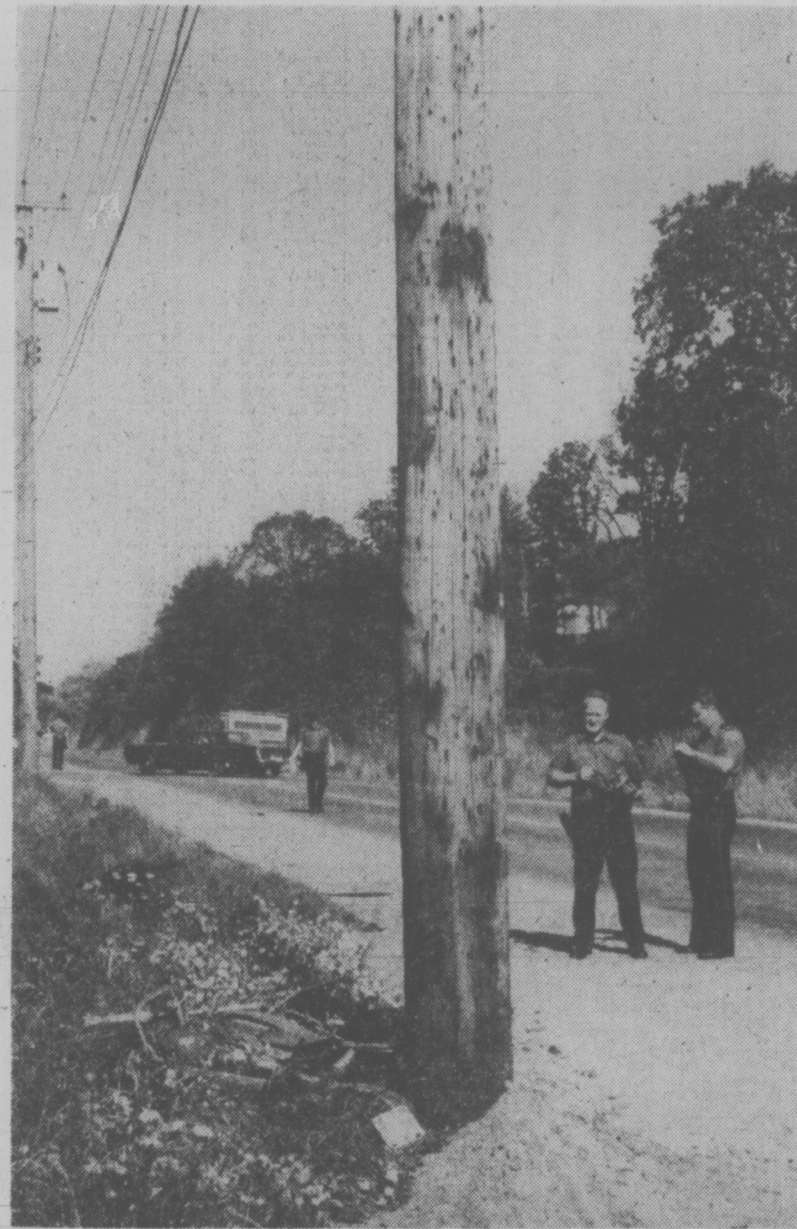

He signed an invoice slip, took the package and left.

Police described the man as 28 to 30, six feet tall, weighing 180 to 190 pounds with blond short hair and clean shaven.

The package was not missed until the next morning when the Vancouver office telephoned to inquire if the package had arrived safely.

"What package?" came the reply.

Police were alerted at 10:15 a.m. Friday.

RIDER'S LEG AMPUTATED

A 23-year-old Victorian has lost a leg as result of injuries received Monday when his motorcycle collided with a pickup truck on Interurban near Grange in Saanich.

Smith and his passenger,

Susan Keck, 20, of 929 Easter, each suffered two broken legs and internal injuries in the accident.

Keck is reported in fair condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital while Smith is also in fair condition at Victoria General.

Saanich police said the motorcycle glanced off the front of the pickup truck then swerved out of control for about 300 feet, hitting one pedestrian and just missing another.

The driver of the truck, Alfred Dumesnil, 658 Langford, was not hurt.

Pedestrian Mrs. Annette Pope, 33, of 3834 Mimosa suffered shock and bruises while her companion, Diane Brayton, of 3437 Mimosa was unhurt.

Cowichan Railway 'Vital'

Rail transport will be vital to the Cowichan Valley and Greater Victoria in years to come, the Canadian Transport Commission's railway committee was told today.

The committee, sitting at The Empress, is considering a CN application to abandon 65 miles of line between Colwood and Deerholme.

Strongly opposing the application, the Cowichan Valley Regional District in a brief said the withdrawal and downgrading of rail transportation has far reaching effects on regional economy, community development, and individual citizens.

"In order to ensure the economic future of the Cowichan Valley Regional District, the board believes this rail line must be maintained for the foreseeable future, it stated.

It observed that second growth timber resource will be harvested in the very near future along much of the right-of-way.

"In fact there is enough logging being done now in the vicinity of the line to make the line profitable if the CN management went after the business," it stated.

Barbara Wallace, MLA for Cowichan-Malahat, supported the regional district's brief.

She warned that if the railway line is abandoned that British Columbians, and Vancouver Islanders particularly, would feel sorely discriminated against because the federal government had not fully honored the Terms of Union under which it undertook to ensure the provision of rail and water transport services.

"For a national railway controlled by Ottawa to be allowed to drop this specific long-held and important feeder line can only add to that sense of grievance and spread resentment far beyond the boundaries of the Cowichan Valley Regional District," she said.

She said a federal agency should not restrict its assessment to dollars and cents at the peril of ignoring the good-will factor.

"After all, goodwill, not economics, is the rock on which the unity of this east-west nation was founded and still exists," she said. "Cowichan Valley needs this line — not just for convenience or to balance the current books — but to grow to its potential."

Westrail Enterprises Ltd., of Victoria, said as an alternative to the CN maintaining the line, the railway could be sold or leased for a token sum to an agency such as the provincial government.

"Alternatively, the provincial government or a local authority at the municipal or regional district level could maintain the line and sub-lease the right to operate freight service to an independent operator, he said.

School Board Backs Porn Fight

Greater Victoria school board will join a one-woman fight against pornography.

But trustee Dr. Mark Fisher thinks his colleagues on the board are chasing the wrong evil.

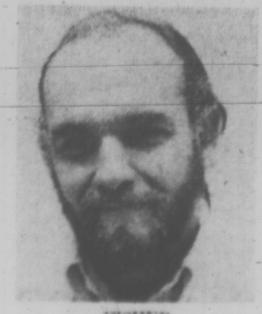

Trustees Monday heard a plea from Mrs. Joan Drew, of 328 Gibbs Road, asking the board to write Attorney General Garde Gardom offering to support his efforts to curb the availability of pornographic magazines in stores.

In a prepared statement Mrs. Drew said there is no historical instance where control of obscenity has endangered freedom, but "there is a correlation between sexual permissiveness and decline of civilization."

Pornographic magazines locally are "either promoted or freely available," she said.

Mrs. Drew said sex cannot be allowed to get to the point where "sexual aberration is a satisfactory way of life."

But Fisher said there is a

question of priorities and that materialism, drugs and alcohol are greater problems.

Pornography is an offshoot, a secondary symptom of other serious social problems, Fisher said.

Mrs. Drew said in two stores of a drug store chain in Victoria, pornographic magazines are readily available to children. In one instance the magazines are on the floor where children have easy access to them. In another store, pornographic magazines are displayed across the aisle from school supplies, she said.

She said she circulated a petition objecting to the store's policy.

Vice-chairman Susan Brice suggested the best way for Mrs. Drew to continue her campaign is through consumer pressure such as the petition.

But when it came to the vote, only Fisher opposed writing Gardom offering the board's support.

Housing! They All Replied

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

As far as residents of the Fernwood-Springridge area are concerned, the No. 1 priority for expenditure of Neighborhood Improvement Program funds is housing, city aldermen were told today.

Reporting to the housing and neighborhood improvement committee on the results of a month-long survey of the area, planning director Geoff Greenhalgh said residents gave housing "by far" the highest rating of importance.

The Fernwood opinion poll was in contrast to earlier surveys in James Bay and Victoria West, where in each case the residents agreed the greatest need was for community recreation facilities.

In Fernwood, social facilities ranked only fifth on a list of six items suggested as the basis for a "shopping list" for the area's $1 million NIP budget.

The door-to-door survey contacted 1,500 of the 2,600 homes in the neighborhood, where residents have protested in recent months about the demolition of single-family homes for apartment and townhouse development.

Greenhalgh said the computer analysis of questionnaire answers shows the following response to the question "What is your order of priority of the types of projects listed?"

Housing, 383; neighborhood clean-up, 295; parks and open space, 222; traffic improvement, 190; social facilities, 154; municipal services, 90.

A big majority of respondents (710) said the acquisition of land for low-cost family housing should be a high priority, and almost the same number chose single-family detached housing in a list of housing style preferences.

In this category, 199 replies favored the conversion of larger homes to suites, while 120 suggested duplex development. Townhouses were endorsed by 129 residents, and three-storey frame apartments by 111.

Greenhalgh noted that under the parks and open space heading, residents did not advocate the acquisition of additional parkland but the improvement of existing amenities, and particularly the provision of small neighborhood playlots and open spaces.

He suggested that once the results of the analysis have been made available to the Fernwood-Springridge NIP committee, city and community representatives put together a more detailed priority list to reflect residents' wishes.

Three More Named

Three more courts martial will be held in connection with funds missing from the junior ranks mess club at CFB Esquimalt.

Master Cpl. Michael Joseph Dalrymple will be tried Sept. 28 and Master Cpl. Adolph Plewa and former Master Cpl. Craig Campbell face court martial Oct. 19.

They were named today as court-martial proceedings started against Cpl. Robert Garner, 32, before judge advocate Lt-Col. J. B. Fay and a five-member panel of officers.

Garner faces 24 charges covering a three-year period during which he was president of the mess, now known as Club 44.

Involved are missing funds amounting to $325 and quantities of liquor and other goods.

The charges include improper acts under the Military Code of Discipline and fraud and conspiracy involving Dalrymple, Plewa and Campbell, a former member of the Armed Forces.

Active New York Breaks D-J 1,000

The Toronto market was fractionally higher in moderate mid-afternoon trading today.

Volume of trading totalled 1.43 million shares compared with 1.21 million at the same time Monday.

Advances led declines 184 to 152 with 239 issues unchanged.

Among industries, General Motors gained 1% to $70.4, Union Carbide 1/2 to $22.2, Chrysler Corp. 1/2 to $20.8, Imperial Oil 1/2 to $22 and Inco A 1/2 to $34.4.

Pacific Petroleum fell 1/2 to $26.4, Canadian Tire A 1/2 to $42, Royal Trust A 1/2 to $18.1, Silverwood Industries A 1/2 to $8.4 and Vulcan Industrial Packaging 1/2 to $16.4.

In the mines, Patino N.V. rose 1/2 to $15.4, Camflo Mines 1/2 to $7.4 and Sherritt Gordon A 1/2 to $7.4. Placer Development dropped 1/2 to $21.4 and Gibraltar Mines 1/2 to $7.4.

Among oils, Alminex was up 1/2 to $7.4, Alberta Eastern Gas 1/2 to $15.4 and Skeye Resources 1/2 to $4.4. North Canadian Oils A 1/2 to $4.2.

A sharp rally erupted in the stock market today, propelling the Dow Jones industrial average through the 1,000 level.

The widely recognized average of 30 blue chips showed a 12.14 gain at 1,006.65 at 2 p.m.

Gainers outdistanced losers by about a 5-2 margin in the over-all count of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Trading was very active on the NYSE, with volume to tailing 19.69 million shares by mid-afternoon.

The Dow has made numerous short-lived trips past 1,000 this year, but none since July 14, when it closed at 1,005.16.

Brokers said much of the impetus for Tuesday's advance came from hopes for a relaxation of U.S. federal reserve credit policy, and an accompanying decline in interest rates.

General Motors topped the active list, up 1% at $72. The Big Board's composite common-stock index rose .51 to 57.21.

On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .41 at 103.90.

Montreal

Prices were mixed in moderate afternoon trading today at Montreal.

Prices rose moderately at London today.

Industrials and mines were higher, with gains in the heavy eight group of stock producing issue. Oils were mixed.

Canadian stocks were higher.

'Best Investment' Advice Alters

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

A successful businessman once told me the best investment by far would be a small apartment building.

"You make a small down payment and then let the tenants pay the mortgage," he explained.

"In a couple of years the rent is high enough to pay the mortgage plus give you a profit. And in eight or 10 years you own the whole place and then everything is gravy."

But that was five years ago, before the advent of rent controls and subsidized housing.

His latest advice is to forget it and put your money in the bank.

It is a simplistic answer and not entirely true because the advice is tinged with overtones of disappointment and disillusionment. Controls, regulations, labor disputes.

And yet, with the present income tax regulations, it makes a great deal of sense to think about banks and trust companies first.

Under present regulations, the best investment by far is one that brings a high rate of interest income up to $1,000 per year. This is because of the legal tax dodge which enables investors to earn up to $1,000 per year in interest completely tax free.

In addition, they can write off the interest of any money borrowed to earn the $1,000.

It takes about $10,000 to earn $1,000 interest per year. Anyone with less than $10,000 to invest is not getting the full free ride he is entitled to.

Therefore, an investment plan for someone with less than $10,000 is very easy, given present economic conditions. Shop around for deposit interest rates of about 10 per cent and put it all in. This does not mean it should all go into one single deposit.

With $15,000 to invest, the indicated action is $10,000 in guaranteed interest certificates and the other $5,000 in something likely to produce capital gains.

Next to earning $1,000 interest, capital gains are the best because only half the income is subject to taxation.

The effective tax rate on capital gains is about 18 per cent. A capital gain of $1,000 adds $500 to taxable income and the effective tax on that amount would be about $180. That leaves $820 after taxes.

By contrast, $1,000 earned by the sweat of your brow leaves you only about $640 after taxes.

But even better than the capital gain, is the straight $1,000 interest income which is still $1,000 after taxes, because of the total exemption.

In addition, if $10,000 is borrowed to earn the interest on the $10,000 (about $1,200) can be written off as well, for a cash value of about $400.

That means $1,400 in one year of tax-free money. The $400 can not be taxed because Revenue Canada has not yet figured out a way to tax its rebates.

No investment counsellors go so far as to advise the average middle-income wage earner to borrow large sums of money for investment purposes, but the option is available for those who enjoy the risks of debt.

The majority of investors prefer to do it the hard (but safe) way by saving a few money month by month until there is enough to make a deposit in a term account.

Montreal Posties Picket Mechanized Sorting Depot

MONTREAL (CP) — Postal workers set up picket lines during the weekend at a new highly-mechanized mail-sorting centre as part of a protest against technological changes which they all agree the post office has implemented in violation of the workers' contract.

Members of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers CUPW marched around the new sorting centre where an open house was being held for postal employees.

The pickets, off-duty employees, were back marching at the centre Monday. The new centre does not open for business until next month.

Joe Davidson, UPW president, told reporters last week that the post office has repeatedly implemented technological changes without giving the union sufficient advance notice, a contravention of the workers' contract.

He said the union has a right to object to the introduction of technological changes.

If negotiations fail to resolve the dispute, an arbitration panel must hand down a binding ruling.

In Montreal, union leaders say the government has proceeded with the construction of three new mail-sorting centres which they say will result in the phasing out of 600 jobs.

Marcel Perreault, president of the Montreal local, said the government has not negotiated the fate of the workers whose jobs might be phased

CP Air Cuts Flights Into Mirabel

MONTREAL (CP) — CP Air has published schedules for the winter months which will eliminate some flights into Montreal's Mirabel Airport and replace them with flights which overfly the city and land instead at Toronto.

PIPELINE A BREAKER

TORONTO (CP) — The Mackenzie Valley pipeline may cost more than $15 billion, not $8 billion as estimated by the federal government, says Robert Page, former chairman of the Committee for an Independent Canada.

Page, a history teacher at Trent University in Peterborough, Ont., said in a telephone interview Monday he does not believe the pipeline will meet its scheduled completion date of 1981 and it may cost Canadian taxpayers billions more than originally estimated.

He told the annual committee meeting in Lunenburg, N.S., on Sunday the pipeline project may be "the final nail in the Trudeau government's coffin."

In the interview Monday, Page said there may be an escalation of costs if the project gets the go-ahead.

'RICH RICHER, POOR POORER'

MIAMI (CP) — The Canadian government should stop suggesting that old-age pensions and other social measures have led to a more equal distribution of income, Shirley Carr, executive vice-president of the Canadian Labor Congress, said today.

"If we look at the facts we find just the opposite is true," Mrs. Carr said in an address to the convention of the Tobacco Workers' International Union.

"In 1965, 20 per cent of the families in Canada received only 4.4 per cent of total national income," she said. "By 1974 their share had declined to only four per cent."

"By contrast, she said, in 1965, the top 20 per cent received no less than 41.1 per cent of average aggregate family income, which increased to 42.2 per cent in 1974."

In other words, she said, the rich are getting richer and the poor poorer.

Mrs. Carr said it is because of this growing gap that the CLC is asking pensioners, students and unemployed workers to take part in its day of protest Oct. 14.

Government has no plans to cut exports of gas to the United States to allow growth in the market for the fuel in Canada, he said.

The minister was commenting on part of an application to the National Energy Board by TransCanada Pipelines Ltd., seeking permission to expand the size of its pipeline from Western Canada into central markets.

In the preamble to the application, TransCanada noted that in the spring of 1975, Ottawa indicated "it may become necessary to curtail export of gas under existing export licences to meet reasonable growth of requirements in Canada until frontier supplies of gas are available."

But Gillespie, appointed to the energy portfolio a year ago, says his position on the matter has not changed.

"If as a result of shortages developing we have to cut exports to the United States we will also make moves in Canada to restrain demand," he says.

Government officials have said previously it would not be a good political move to cut off gas exports to the U.S.-purchased under long-term contracts approved by government-to expand domestic gas markets.

The government stand means any market growth will have to be supplied from conventional producing areas in the western provinces.

TransCanada wants to expand its pipeline to move an additional 38 billion cubic feet of gas annually to markets in Ontario and Quebec.

OTTAWA (CP) — Any curtailment of natural gas exports to the United States will be accompanied by government-enforced restraints in gas demand at home, Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie says.

"I haven't finished getting everything I want," he told a news conference.

He said he understands the person or persons who wrote the section on Indians are not employed by government, but he wants to find out for certain.

The manual was put into use at Yellowknife Correctional Institute in June 1971 but was withdrawn after seven months. A copy was obtained last week by the Canadian Press and its publication resulted in the resignation of Clarence Wilkins, chief of the Northwest Territories corrections branch.

Portable Classroom Solution Chosen for Lambrick School

Greater Victoria School Board Monday reluctantly agreed to spend $9,500 to shift two portable classrooms to the overcrowded Lambrick Park secondary school in Gordon Head.

Trustees considered several alternatives: ask students and teachers to make do in the crowded situation, revise the boundaries so Cedar Hill secondary would take some of the pupils, ask for volunteers to change schools under the threat that attending classes in shifts would go on all year — before reaching the decision.

All the suggestions received strong opposition from acting schools superintendent John Wiens.

Wiens said 60 grade 8 students who are already two weeks into their programs at Lambrick Park would have to change schools.

He said if the boundaries are changed to facilitate the move of students, the new boundaries would have to go beyond the school creating a ridiculous situation where students living north of Lambrick Park would have to walk past the school on the way to Cedar Hill.

Wiens said the board could save $10,000 but the district

FIRST OF NINE portable classrooms arrives at the site of the Tsartlip Indian school which was destroyed by fire June 19. About 150 children from pre-school-kindergarten through Grade 7 should be in the new classrooms by the middle of next week. The 10-foot by 60-foot portables are a replacement for the burned $250,000 school building. (John McKay photo) administration would spend the next two months explaining to the community where the boundaries should have been.

"Let's save our battle with the public for a $500,000 saving," he said.

Trustee Mark Fisher said if people want to move to Gordon Head where the taxes are less, they are going to have to face the fact their children may have to walk to school.

"The days of a school just around the corner are over," he said.

Chairman Bill Ross agreed: "The board has got to be awfully gutsy with regard to reorganizing if we are going to keep schools filled," he said. "The existing concepts are just going to have to go, but it can be done without any educational damage."

Meanwhile, the board agreed to a policy where empty or partially empty school buildings will be rented. A priority was set out where first choice would be given to non-profit educational or cultural groups.

The policy decision was actually a little late. The old

Bank Street Elementary building is rented by Victoria College of Art; the old Spectrum, (Mount View) vocational wing is rented to Camosun College and Sentinel Elementary is rented to the Greater Victoria Association for the Retarded.

Lampson Elementary is vacant and boarded up. And South Park Elementary will be closed June, 1977.

AIR SEARCH ENDS IN CRASH

A North Vancouver pilot crashed his plane Monday morning during a search for his son missing a week on a fishing trip.

Robert Engler's light aircraft apparently struck a treetop in a low pass over Browning Harbor, North Pender Island, and dropped into 20 feet of water. Engler suffered face cuts but managed to swim ashore.

An RCMP helicopter en route from Vancouver to Patricia Bay was diverted to pick up Engler and he was taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital in Victoria.

The hospital today described his condition as fair. Engler's son, Paul, 21, was the object of a police search that was called off Sunday after his 10-foot skiff, a life-jacket and fishing net were recovered last week. The young man had left Browning Harbor to go fishing last Tuesday and is now presumed drowned.

Thief Knows: Let Sleeping Dog Lie

NANAIMO — The sign said "beware of the dog" but the thieves ignored it and Ger-thieves ignored it and the Ger-sleeping.

RCMP said Monday $4,000 in cash was stolen from Fairview Store, Howard and Second, overnight Sunday as the occupants and the "watch-dog" slept.

The thieves rolled a large safe to the store's rear entrance where they pried it open and took $3,000. They also took $1,000 elsewhere in the building.

And the chances are you don't want to give up any of that.

Which brings us to Vantage.

Speaking of Champions How About Our Town?

Notes and like that, and there undoubtedly was more going on in our town this year in a national way than across the pond in big brother Vancouver. Yes, Victoria played host to no less than five national championships, were outright winners in two, had two excellent seconds in two others and had a minor share in part of the fifth. Besides, three city teams left this overseas outpost to bring back other championship honors. Yes, all that.

So a pat on the back for our guys and gals. McDonalds won the Minto Cup national junior lacrosse championship in fine style four straight, and Philip Delesalle took the national men's gymnastics championship, just as easily and both before the home folks. Victoria Scorpions came within six points of winning the men's national basketball title, losing to Winnipeg in the final, and Wanda Allan grabbed the second of only two Olympic archery team berths right here in the nationals. And in golf, Cee Ferguson was a part of the winning B.C. Willingdon Cup team, and if he didn't win the amateur before turning professional, he did beat the pros the week before in the B.C. Open at Vancouver. So there.

Meanwhile, on the road, victory came for the second year for Victoria Bate in Canadian men's fastball while Victoria West took over the banner from London Boxing Club in club soccer and preserved that honor for the west.

And not to be outdone, guess what our gals did in basketball? Victoria Home Lumber are the reigning queens of that sport in the Dominion.

Which isn't bad, wot, and I imagine the city fathers will be arranging some sort of a reception for all these champions.

Well, it was worth a thought, anyway, because what other town has had it so good with so many. Quick now, name one.

Then there was some sad news, especially for the old-timers. Gus McKinnon, a brother of Archie, has been described as one of the most dominating athletes of his time in the city. He excelled in basketball, soccer, football, swimming and boxing in the early 20s before emigrating to the U.S. where he moved into the training field, particularly in swimming.

When he retired he was swim coach at the University of California in Berkeley and aquatic commissioner for the southwest area. McKinnon passed away this month at age 77 in Great Falls, Mont.

With all the fuss about bad tennis calls hitting the news services again and causing all sorts of outbursts, few of them good for the game, isn't it time tennis eliminated the margin of human fallibility on the service point by entering the electronic age. That's the subject a New York Times reader brought up after the Forest Hills fiasco. And it has merit, the point being: why not put a border around the service box tapes. This could be wired in circuit with a switch and buzzer at the referee's chair. The referee would close the circuit just before the serve. The sound of the buzzer would give clear an incontrovertible notice that the serve was out. Once the ball was in play, the circuit would be disconnected. Simple eh?

Hindsight is a great attribute and many in this profession live by it, but how about a pat on the back to Peter Webster of the B.C. Sports Hall of Fame for his foresight.

Writing in "Replay", a Hall of Fame publication, back on May 9... Webster said of B.C. Lacrosse teams being re-stocked with some of Canada's top players from the disbanded pro league... "B.C. can look forward to re-establishing itself as the Lacrosse Capital of Canada." Salmonbellies and McDonalds will drink to that.

There has been a lot written about the attempt of transsexual tennis player Dr. Ronnie Richards to get approval to play with the girls, one of which she is now; but thank goodness it all hasn't been of a serious nature.

Jeanie Brinkman, promotional director of the Virginia Sims tennis tour did it best when she said:

"From everything I've heard, Dr. Richards is a very nice person. I'd love to send her one of our T-shirts. 'The T-shirt reads: 'You've Come a Long Way, Baby.'"

Matthews, Brown Top Prep Races

Cheryl Matthews of Esquimalt and Paul Brown of Clarendon won by substantial margins Monday in the opening meet of the Greater Victoria High School Cross-Country League at the University of Victoria.

Miss Matthews finished 20 seconds ahead of Peggy Nelson of Dunsuir in the 2,400-metre girls' race and Brown came in a full 24 seconds before Bill Barber of Esquimalt in the 5,300-metre boys' event.

Miss Matthews clocked a time of eight minutes, 30 seconds while Brown finished in a time of 18:21.

Esquimalt topped both team competitions.

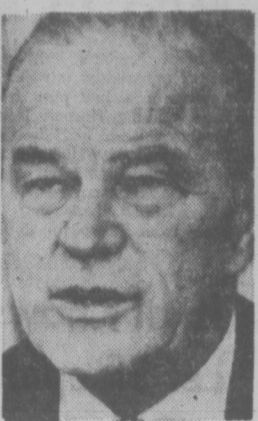

Carole Pickard (3rd), Rebecca Staples (6th) and Laura Keizer (8th) combined with Miss Matthews to collect 33 points under the reverse-scoring system. Bob Wilson (3rd), Tony Theriault (4th) and John White (7th) combined with Barber for 24 points to top the boys' team event.

Clarendon was second in both events, with 51 points in the girls' competition and 47 in the boys' event.

NBA Rules Out Third Referee

CHICAGO (AP) — A recommendation to adopt the use of a third referee for the 1976-77 National Basketball Association season was voted down last week by the league's board of governors. NBA commissioner Larry O'Brien said varying opinions over the role of the third official were the main reason the proposal was rejected.

JACK KENT COOKE

Cooke's Teams 'Can Be Bought'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Washington Redskins are on the market for a record $22.8 million and the chief stockholder, Jack Kent Cooke, says all his sports properties are for sale, the Washington Star Norris Siegel, said the paper had obtained a copy of the financial document the Redskins have been circulating among lawyers and brokers coast to coast and also re-reports.

The Star, in a story by ceived a confirmation from Cooke in Los Angeles.

"Everything I own can be bought," said Cooke, a 63-year-old former Canadian who took up United States citizenship in 1960.

In addition to the National Football League Redskins, he owns Los Angeles Lakers of the National Basketball Association, Los Angeles Kings of the National Hockey League, and the $20 million Forum where the Lakers and Kings play.

Cooke originally was a 25-per-cent investor in the Redskins but his holdings have escalated to a point where he now controls 74 per cent of the football club's shares.

Cooke told the Star he was not pushing the Redskins sale but added: "If a buyer comes along who can meet the price, I will sell."

Although Cooke, whose investment 15 years ago was $350,000, would not put a price on the franchise, correspondence attached to the team's official financial statements unmistakably indicated the price in excess of $22 million — $16 million for the team and unpaid bank loan of $6.8 million.

The asking price of $22.8 million is the largest fee ever sought for a sports franchise, The Star said. The two new expansion teams, Tampa Bay and Seattle, were priced at $16 million and the Baltimore Colts were purchased by Robert Irsay for $19 million.

The Redskins' financial statement also disclosed a 1974 player payroll of more than $3 million, which they claim gives them the NFL salary leadership. It also showed an outlay of almost $300,000 to pay players with a no-cut contract who were released.

When the Redskins were founded in 1933 in Boston, the 1,000 shares issued were valued at only $2,800. There are only three shareholders today — Cooke, attorney Edward Bennett Williams and the estate of the late Milton King, Williams who is president of the club, and the King estate each owns 13 per cent.

RIGNEY EXPECTED TO RETIRE

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — San Francisco Giants' Bill Rigney, expected to step aside as manager at the end of the 1976 National League baseball season, will announce his plans at a news conference tonight.

The Giants' front office said Monday that Rigney's announcement will be made before the game against Los Angeles Dodgers.

Rigney, 58, was hired by his close friend, Bob Lurie, after Lurie and Bud Hersheth of Phoenix bought the baseball team from Horace Stoneham last winter. It was considered probable that Rigney would serve just one year as manager, and with his club last in the Western Division most of the year, Rigney dropped several hints he wasn't enjoying the job.

Jimmy Gabriel, who, as player and assistant coach, was credited with rekindling Seattle's aggressive spirit Monday was named head coach of the Sounders of the North American Soccer League.

Gabriel, 35, who has been with the Sounders since their birth as an expansion team in 1974, succeeds John Best, Seattle's only other head coach. At his own request, the popular Best stated that he did not wish to continue as coach after the 1976 season, in which Seattle earned a playoff berth for the second consecutive year.

For the time being, Best, a five-time NASL all-league defender at Dallas who made the transition from player to coach in 1974, will remain with the Sounders while examining off-the-field opportunities with the club as well as investigating other avenues of his soccer career. He has said he would like to move into a front office job, such as general manager, with a NASL team.

Don Prudhomme of Granda Hills, Calif., won his second straight Fall National's Funny Car championship Sunday, surviving a rash of upsets in the first renewal of the National Hot Rod Association drag racing event at Seattle International Raceway.

Tommy Davis, one of baseball's finest hitters since he broke into the game in 1956, was sold for an undisclosed amount of money Monday by the California Angels to the Kansas City Royals, which will be Davis' 10th major league team.

Davis, 37, hit .265 for the Angels in 72 games this year. He won the major league batting title in 1962 when he hit .346 for the Los Angeles Dodgers and again the following year when he batted .325.

Davis will join Kansas City today but, according to baseball rules, will not be eligible for the playoffs.

Muncy's actual speed was 117.6 miles per hour but the penalty gave him a speed of 96.858.

Met Rookie Shocks Bucs On Ninth-Inning Homer

By The Associated Press

Willie Stargell's running out of words, Danny Murtaugh's running out of patience... and Pittsburgh Pirates are running out of time.

There seemed to be little of anything left for Pittsburgh after Monday's heart-breaking 5-4 loss to the New York Mets.

"I don't want to talk," said Stargell, the usually talkative team leader of the Pirates. "I've run out of words."

"I'm upset," said Murtaugh, the Pirate manager. "I have to be upset. We can't afford to lose, especially not like this."

The Pirates were understandably at the end of their rope after the defeat dealt a hard jolt to their National League East pennant hopes.

On the verge of picking up one-half game on the idle Philadelphia Phillies, the Pirates saw the apparent victory vanish over the right centre field wall at Shea Stadium — on the wings of rookie Lee Mazzilli's two-out, two-run homer in the ninth inning.

The loss dropped Pirates 4½ games behind the Phillies, five games down in the loss column. The Phillies have 15 games left to play in the regular season and the Pirates 13.

The game was the only one played in the National League Monday. In American League action, the Milwaukee Brewers beat the New York Yankees 4-2; the Boston Red Sox routed the Detroit Tigers 12-6 and the California Angels nipped the Texas Rangers 1-0.

The Pirates had erased an early 3-0 deficit to take a 4-3 lead in the eighth inning on Stargell's 19th homer of the season. In the Mets' ninth, pinch-hitter John Milner singled off Pirate reliever Kent Telave, 5-2, and Mazzilli, who was brought up from the minor leagues earlier this month, followed with his second home run of the season.

Rookie Dan Thomas' fourth-inning homer and Don Money's two-run single helped Milwaukee defeat New York.

The defeat left the Yankees' "magic number" for clinching the American League East title at three games, Runnerup Baltimore did not play and trails New York by 1½ games, going into a four-game series between the teams which begins today.

Cecil Cooper drove in four runs with a homer and a single and Jim Rice blasted two solo homers to lead Boston's rout of Detroit.

California right-hander Nolan Ryan got a run-scoring double from battery mate Terry Humphrey and made it stand up for his fifth consecutive victory, a three-hit shut-out over Texas.

Hurler Settles Out of Court

CINCINNATI (AP) — An assault charge against Cincinnati Reds pitcher Pat Zachry was dropped Monday in Municipal Court here. Attorneys said the charge was dropped after both sides agreed to an undisclosed out-of-court settlement.

Zachry was charged with assault after a game last month in which fan Daniel Davis claimed the pitcher "hit me with his fist several times" and cursed Davis' wife after turning down an autograph request by Davis' 11-year-old brother.

KRAUTZUM IMPOSES CURFEW ON TEAM

VANCOUVER (UPD) — Coach Eckhard Krautrum cracked down on his Canadian World Cup soccer squad Monday, imposing an 11 p.m. curfew and warning players to take their opening-playdown game against the United States more seriously.

The match will be played here Friday night.

Krautrum, 34, who also coached the Vancouver Whitecaps in the North American Soccer League, decided on the curfew after complaining that several players had been late for practice.

He said Friday's match could be the most important of their careers but some were not taking it seriously enough.

"We have a good team but we must work hard if we are to succeed in the World Cup," he said.

The United States team is scheduled to arrive in Vancouver Wednesday following a training tour of South America and a stint on artificial turf at the Seattle Kingdome.

Erving Demands Contract

NEW YORK (AP) — Julius Erving New York Nets' star forward, said Monday he would not report to the National Basketball Association team's training camp this week until his contract negotiations with the club were settled.

"I am eager to play, but I won't join the team because I can't be myself during this time," said Erving, who led the Nets to the American Basketball Association championship last season and was named the most valuable player both during the regular season and playoffs.

Erving, through his agent, Irwin Weiner, had asked the Nets to restructure his estimated $275,000 a year, seven-year contract, which has four years remaining.

Weiner said he discussed the situation last week with club president Roy Boe and the Nets agreed to the proposal. Weiner said the team agreed to renegotiate the remaining four years of the contract and add three years to it.

MYSTERY UNSOLVED

The disappearance of a Portland couple on a trimaran that sailed from Hawaii in May, remains a mystery in spite of an investigation launched by their family.

Mrs. Malcolm McMinn, of Portland, Ore., and her husband travelled to Vancouver Island and the San Juan Islands to pass out leaflets and to interview witnesses who reportedly saw her son and daughter-in-law's sailboat.

Michael McMinn and his wife Cordelia, both 26, left Hanalei, Kauai, in their 25-foot trimaran Drum, May 12. They had food and water for 80 days and an automatic signalling device with a range of 150 miles. They never arrived.

"We confirmed two sightings, and discounted two more," said Mrs. McMinn.

She said she and her husband had spent $1,000 in the search and passed out information leaflets to ferry captains, marina operators and to pilots.

"We saw for ourselves how impossible it is to go over all the islands you have up there. We're just hoping the flyers will produce something."

She said hijacking has not been discounted but there have not been many reported incidents in northern waters.

"We'll just have to hold tight until we hear something."

CAC Takes On B.C. Hydro

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — The president of the 100,000-member Consumer Association of Canada has plans to take on British Columbia Hydro, Ontario Hydro and the National Energy Board.

Ruth Lotzkar of North Vancouver says CAC is trying to make B.C. Hydro open its books to the public "so we can see if we want the rates increased."

"Then we'll go to Ontario Hydro," she said. "These are not small issues. They are major things."

The association is trying to get the National Energy Board to discuss recent increases in the price of gasoline.

Is the Body Really Pizarro's?

LIMA (Reuter) — Hundreds of people file past a catafalque in the cathedral here each week, staring in awe at a shrivelled corpse.

They pay 10 soles (15 cents) to enter a darkened chapel inside the cathedral and climb steps to the glass coffin where the emaciated body lies in state.

The visitors are paying homage to an illiterate and humble soldier who more than four centuries ago led a band of fellow Spanish adventurers to conquer the Inca Empire of Peru.

A marble plaque says the skinned skull and body, still partially covered with flesh and cloth, are the remains of the Peruvian conqueror—Francisco Pizarro.

A label says the reddish powder inside a jar beside the body come from the intestines of the Peruvian conqueror, who was murdered in Lima, June 26, 1541.

However, a number of historians say this is not the body of Francisco Pizarro.

They say the facts about the body have been suspected for some time, but that the Roman Catholic authorities won't admit to anything spurious.

One historian, Felix Guillen, also a doctor specializing in police and crime work, has collected all relevant accounts of Pizarro's burial.

He says his investigations prove that the body in the glass coffin is not that of Pizarro.

"I started off thinking that it would be simple case of forensic work," said Dr. Guillen. "A forensic study would prove immediately if that body was buried in the 16th century or the 19th century."

He said all historians agreed that Pizarro was killed by a fatal dagger wound in the neck and "that would show up under study."

"But the church authorities refused me permission to examine the body," so he turned to the archives, and produced what appears to be a convincing account.

Pizarro's body was hurriedly buried in a courtyard of the cathedral after his murder, but church and court archives show it did not lie there long.

The official version is that it was transferred to a crypt under the high altar from where it was exhumed in 1881.

But Dr. Guillen has found documents which mention two subsequent exhumations.

A document, signed by a municipal lawyer of Lima, Alonso Carrion in 1623 refers to the removal of "the bones" of Pizarro.

"There is no further satisfactory documentary evidence about the bones after that date," said Dr. Guillen. "We must assume that they no longer exist."

"But there was a third exhumation in 1661 in which a sworn testament describes the discovery of Pizarro's head in a lead urn."

The 1661 account, signed by church and legal authorities, states:

"We found inside a box a small lead urn upon which was written the inscription as follows: 'Here is the head of Senor Marques don Francisco Pizarro, who discovered and conquered the kingdoms of Peru.'"

"The church authorities should follow up these investigations," he said, "because there's a good chance that the lead urn still is somewhere inside the cathedral."

STEVE WONDER'S NEW ALBUM is finally in the hands of Motown. Officials from the record company stopped by Crystal Sound Studios in Hollywood Sept. 5 to pick up the long-awaited final tracks from Wonder. The LP was completed a year after its scheduled release, two years after the release of Wonder's last album, Songs in the Key of Life is a two-record set, with an additional seven-inch record containing four songs. The LP package should be released by Oct. 1.

To celebrate the completion of Songs, Wonder flew to New York that night to visit his one-and-a-half-year-old daughter Alisha.

LYNNYRD SKYNYRD GUITARIST Gary Rossington was seriously injured in a car accident in Jacksonville, Fla., Sept. 5. Rossington and a girlfriend were returning from a party when he lost control of his car and it hit a telephone pole, a tree and then a house. Rossington was hospitalized in a state of shock, suffering from an injured jaw, a broken knee cap and bruises and lacerations from head to toe. At press time, doctors were unsure if he had also sustained internal injuries, not wanting to conduct tests until his body recovered from the shock. His friend, meantime, suffered minor cuts and bruises.

Skyndrd was forced to withdraw from dates in Arizona and California with Aerosmith; their fall tour is still scheduled to start Sept. 21, coinciding with the release of their two-record live album, One More From the Road. At press time, it was too early to tell whether Rossington would be able to perform again, much less make any of the dates on the fall tour.

THE COMPLETE, or virtually complete Who concert itinerary: Phoenix, Oct. 6; Oakland, Oct. 9 and 10; Portland, Oct. 13; Seattle, Oct. 14; Edmonton, Oct. 16; Winnipeg, Oct. 18; Toronto, Oct. 21 and 22; Montreal, Oct. 23. Never ones to leave their best show in the rehearsal studio, the Who won't get together until Oct. 5 in Phoenix. Peter Townshend, Roger Daltrey and John Entwistle are scattered about England now while Keith Moon, reported to be in "excellent" health by one of his aides, is supervising the construction of his home in Malibu.

PETER FRAMPTON WILL START work on his next album by the end of September. He'll record the first tracks at his upstate New York home, in a mobile recording studio. One of them may be an instrumental tribute to his favorite guitarist, the late Django Reinhardt, tentatively called Jingo Django. He'll record through the end of the year, with time off for his Oct. 8-10 stand at Madison Square Garden and a 19-day, seven-country European tour starting Oct. 22. The album is pegged to hit the stands Jan. 10, exactly one year after the release of Frampton Comes Alive. That LP has sold a whopping 3,660,000 units and still reigns in the Top Five.

AFTER 20 YEARS of marriage, Ike and Tina Turner have split up. Tina is living with their four teen-aged sons, and their Baldwin Hills (L.A.) home has been put up for sale. The Turners' agent said they will continue to record and tour together, although there are no present plans to do so.

KINKY FRIEDMAN WAS

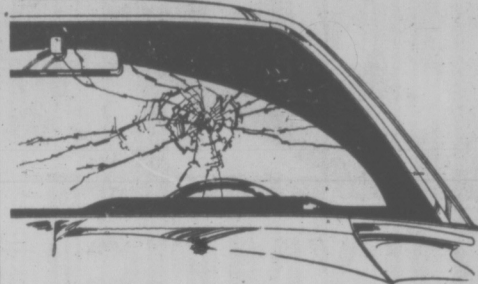

ONE of 1,500 people who showed up for Rod McKuen's autograph party at Bretano's bookstore in Beverly Hills recently. Friedman, in feathered Stetson and satin cowboy shirt, had his copy of McKuen's new book Finding My Father, in hand and Rod signed it: "I am a fan of yours, I love you." "He's probably had a lot of abuse heaped on him from every critical B— in the world," said Kinky afterwards. "But the book is surprisingly good. And I kinda dig the cat, he was a real mensch. I'd like to take him down to Cal Worthington's" (L.A.'s super TV-salesman auto dealer).

Peru's Sol Cut in Value

LIMA (Reuter) — Peru announced a fractional devaluation of the sol Monday in what bankers said appeared to be the beginning of a series of minor readjustments to the U.S. dollar rate.

The sol, which was devalued by more than 30 per cent last June, was pegged at 65.17 to the U.S. dollar. It was quoted at 65 on Friday.

June's devaluation, accompanied by major price increases, sparked street protests which drew the military government to declare a state of emergency and curfew. Both remain in force.

THE Victoria Times PRESENTS A SERIES OF EXCERPTS FROM "THE FAR SIDE OF THE STREET"

The memories and reflections of a working newspaperman, a candid account of his long, varied and improbable lifetime, and a fond look at his Unknown Country.

by BRUCE HUTCHISON

In 1901 Bruce Hutchison was born at Prescott, Ontario, in an old stone house close by the famous windmill captured and held by the Fenian invaders in 1838. He was transported from this historic scene to British Columbia at the age of six weeks, a fact which allows him to think of himself as a native Westerner who suffered the minor accident of birth elsewhere. After an adventurous boyhood spent in the boom towns of the B.C. interior he finally settled in Victoria, and it was there, in 1918, that he started work at the Victoria Daily Times. Journalism has been his life ever since, for almost sixty years. Those years have now given him his best story — the story of his life.

In Bruce Hutchison's own words this book is "an account of a long, varied, and improbable lifetime in a rough frontier society; in Canada's modern cities and remote wilderness, in foreign lands, and often at the centre of great events. As the title suggests, these memories, and the author's twilight reflections, are told from the viewpoint of an impartial spectator, on The Far Side of the Street."

After 1925, when he was appointed to the Ottawa Press Gallery, he rubbed shoulders with Bennett, Mackenzie

King, Borden, Meighen, St. Laurent, Diefenbaker, Pearson, and Trudeau, and a host of others, some famous, some obscure. His keen perceptions of the political scene, his obviously sincere patriotism, and his gifted way with words gained him recognition as the dean of Canadian journalists. In turn, this role made him an honoured visitor in foreign capitals, and earned him many friends in Washington, London and the capitals of Europe. Significantly, he was the first winner of the new award for Distinguished Journalism in the Commonwealth given by the Royal Society of Arts in London.

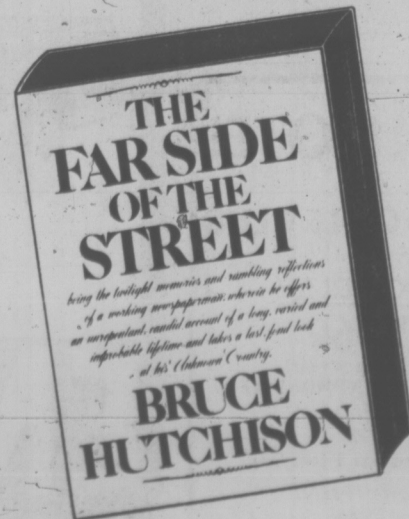

But despite these long years of viewing the world scene at the highest level and despite a career that has seen him edit the Winnipeg Free Press, the Victoria Times, and The Vancouver Sun, he has remained the producer of a series of informal domestic essays which have delighted readers for generations.

If one man could write an account of Canadian life during the past fifty years of change, and provide an eyewitness record of the nation's politics, Bruce Hutchison is the man — and The Far Side of the Street is the book.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Bruce Hutchison is a newspaperman in the truest sense of the word but has turned out a number of books in his "spare time." Among the products of his leisure is one of the classics of Canadian literature THE UNKNOWN COUNTRY which won the Governor-General's award in 1942, and THE INCREDIBLE CANADIAN which won the same award in 1952. His other books include THE FRASER, CANADA — TOMORROW'S GIANT, THE STRUGGLE FOR THE BORDER, MR. PRIME MINISTER and CANADA'S LONELY NEIGHBOUR. He also contributed the text to the enormously successful Centennial book — CANADA, A YEAR OF THE LAND.

Despite his travels he has remained an unshakeable family man; devoted to his profession and his remote cabin in the woods where this book was written.

Telephone exchange of 60 years ago

Modern switchboard uses up to 40 operators

When Communications Minister Jack Davis dials "1880" on a special telephone in downtown Victoria Wednesday afternoon, the curtain will magically drop on a tribute to Robert Burns McKicking.

It's a bit of gimmickry arranged for the official opening of what is to be simply called the Telephone Building, the $5 million centre B.C. Tel added beside its old building on Yates near Blanshard and actually opened almost a year ago.

As Davis dials that final "0", current will flash through a special link (if all goes well) in the building's bewildering exchange and return to the lobby to burn out a section of fuse wire and so drop the curtain masking a commemorative plaque.

The plaque pays tribute to McKicking, who organized and became manager of the Victoria and Esquimalt Telephone Company in 1880, two years after he brought the first phones to the young city.

On the face of it, the phone hasn't changed all that much in the past century. The little crank handles have gone, the dials are going and buttons have arrived and the traditional black phone is now offered in many hues and with slimmer lines. But you still talk and listen.

The changes are miniaturized and tucked away in awesome facilities like the new electronic exchange on the third floor of the new building. Worth another $5 million, it's a computer-controlled switching system which provides all "28" exchange subscribers with electronic long distance service.

Basically, it's a more efficient way for the telephone company to do the same thing, but that's what's needed when just about everyone has a phone and doesn't hesitate to call long distance with it.

What electronic control equipment makes possible is future use of your telephone as a mini-computer which can be linked with big computers to provide some space age services, says Ken Horodyski, public affairs manager.

Some examples:

- Call forwarding, where, for example, if you are moving from your office to another office you can punch in a forwarding number and have your calls automatically routed to your new location;

- three-way calling, such as conference calling, without advance preparation by the operator;

- call waiting, a service in which an electronic tone tells you another call is waiting on your line.

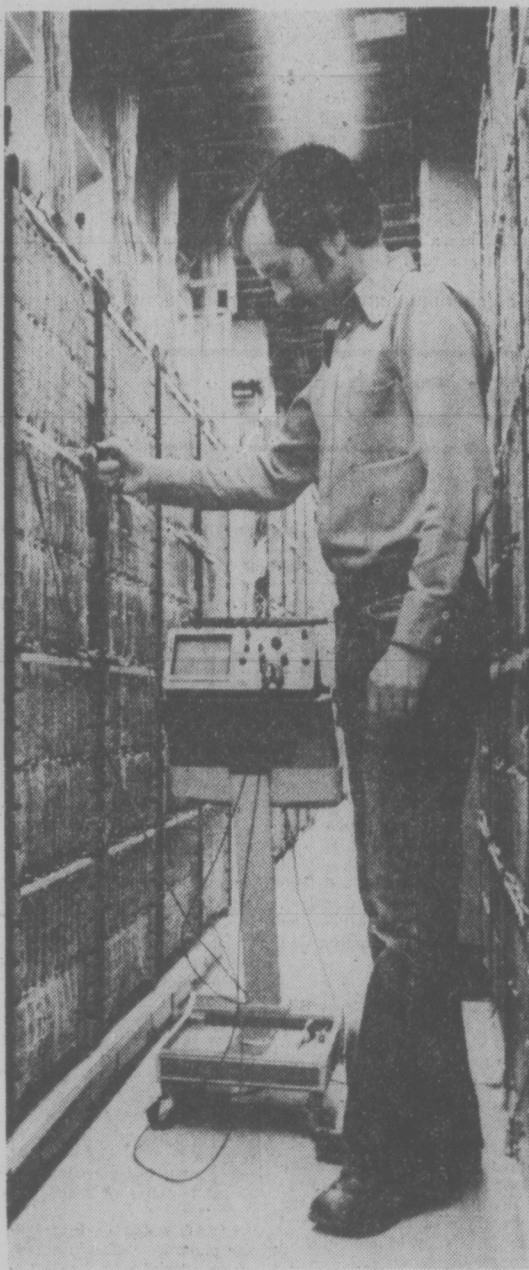

Horodyski says cheque-writing might become ancient history as you instruct your bank's computer in future what bills to pay.

The Telephone Building's electronic exchange has its air supply thoroughly conditioned. Dust particles could foul up this world of miniature circuits.

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS ... it tells you how

Some working mothers in California have come up with an idea that [1] gives them extra leisure time, [2] saves money on their food bills and [3] cuts the energy requirements of their households. They've organized a dinner-cooking co-op and it works like this: Once every week, each woman cooks enough dinner for all seven participating families. By purchasing in larger quantities for that one meal, she usually gets a pretty good buy on meat, vegetables, etc., on a per-serving basis. At a specified time, a member from each of the other six households stops by with a container and carries off the portion of the meal prepared for his or her family. That's it... except for the fact that the first lady doesn't have to worry about preparing dinner again for a whole week!

Eyes Are the Key, Says Makeup Artist

TORONTO (CP) — An international makeup artist has described the North American woman as a "conglomerate" — a varied mix of the nationality groups and ethnic backgrounds living on this continent.

Glenn Roberts, who travels throughout the world for the Elizabeth Arden cosmetic firm, said the North American woman's loveliness may come from her Irish or Italian, Jewish or Oriental heritage.

Roberts, who teaches makeup techniques said he looks at a bare face — the shape and structure — and then zooms in on the eyes. The eyes he said are the most important part of a woman's face.

"You can usually tell a woman's age by how her makeup is applied. The idea of makeup is not to make you look younger but when applied in a contemporary way it will do just that.

THROW-AWAY CLOTHES BACK

MONTREAL (CP) — Guaranteed to last at least two wearings, disposable clothes are about to hit the Canadian scene—again.

Made of Tyvek, an industrial polyethylene product developed by Du Pont in 1968, it looks like a well-used polishing cloth but has been taken up by several European, American and Canadian designers.

Turned into a fashion fabric, it has arrived in overalls, coveralls, hooded sweat jackets and coat-dresses—in silver, jet and white.

Made entirely of very fine polyethylene fibres spun in continuous strands and bounded together by heat and pressure, Tyvek, technically described as spun-bonded Olefin, has little reason to be running around in today's fashion circles.

A calculated throw-away, it has done yeoman service in hospitals and industry. Laboratory coats, coveralls, aprons, smocks, shirts, pants, operating-room gowns, shoe covers, scrub suits, sheets, pillowcases and many items of protective clothing are currently in use—along with motel-issue swimsuits, squall jackets and party costumes.

Ranging all the way from stiff and paper-like to porous, soft and drapable, Tyvek can be printed, embossed, thermo-shaped, coated, laminated and fabricated by folding, sheeting, die-cutting, sewing, hot sealing, glueing and pasting.

It was originally planned for tags, labels, banners, signs, wallcovers, charts, packages, wallmaps, envelopes and for limited use in disposable apparel fields, but Italians gave it a big fashion twist a few years ago and the young French designers followed.

Fashion enthusiasts admit that the crushed-looking stuff is neither practical nor comfortable nor pleasing to the eye—but they do think it is fun.

Their best designer efforts are labelled "This is a fun garment" and tagged "Wash gently but not often."

Those who have tried the funny things report that a three-wash cycle of wear is the ultimate projection.

"It's an unreal idea," says Allan Goldin, a Montreal designer, who is having most of the locally available throw-away clothes made up in Hong Kong.

Plan Retirement Programs—Report

EDMONTON (CP) — A study has recommended the Alberta government set up training programs to prepare people for retirement.

The report, released here, calls for an agency to assist in the development of training programs.

The study was prepared by the Third Career Research Society, a non-profit organization made up of persons either retired or near retirement. The investigation was commissioned by the federal and provincial governments.

The group bases its findings on interviews with more than 1,000 Albertans, all over the age of 45.

The group sees the proposed agency setting up training programs for industry, labor and government and providing programs for organizations which cannot support their own.

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP
DEAR LYNN and JOEL: I recently purchased an Iron Cross Begonia and I can't seem to figure out what type of care it needs. It was absolutely beautiful when I bought it, but in spite of the fact that I kept it in good light, watered it enough to keep it dampish, gave it as much humidity as I could possibly provide, it soon began to shrivel up to the point where now all I've got left is dry, brown leaves.—J.A.W.

Dear J.A.W.: Buying it in the first place, no, we're not being facetious, just honest. The Iron Cross Begonia, a foliage plant rather than a blooming plant (although it does produce insignificant little pink blooms), is virtually impossible to maintain anywhere but in a greenhouse. The trouble with this plant is that it's practically irresistible to pass up if you see one, so if you can afford it, consider it equivalent to cut flowers, keep it healthy just as long as you possibly can, and then resign yourself to eventually having to send it to that Great Greenhouse in the Sky.

Retired Active Too

EDMONTON (CP) — President Mary Davis of the executive board of the Alberta Society for the Retired and Semi-Retired says it is time to stop putting retired people "on the shelf."

In a comment on a report released by the provincial government, Mrs. Davis said "We have to get away from the rocking-horse syndrome." "Older people have the right to design their own activities," she said. "You're a person as long as you're doing this."

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: I am a 17-year-old girl who is reasonably intelligent and quite attractive so I'm told. My problem has to do with boys. I have no trouble getting dates with guys my age or a little older.

The problem comes when I am with some boy I like and we are on a dark, country road, or for that matter on the couch in my living room. I am not a virgin, but I'm not a tramp by any means.

I don't want to say no. I want him to go on and on, and never stop. I know I should stop him, but when I do, I feel so frustrated afterward, I want to die.

Why shouldn't I enjoy myself? I don't mean with every guy that comes along, only the one I feel something special for. "This time I'll keep it innocent," I tell myself, but kissing and cuddling build up until I am desperate to have the boy make love to me.

Is lust normal at my age? What is really wrong with going all the way if you really care for someone — NORMAL AND HEALTHY AT 17.

DEAR NORMAL: "Lust" (which is another word for sexual desire) is perfectly normal in all healthy teenagers, but if you expect me to give you permission to go all the way, you're asking the wrong person.

When you are sufficiently mature in your judgments to make your own decisions, take full responsibility for your actions and handle the consequences, you won't ask me (or anyone else) for advice.

DEAR ABBY: I hope you won't think this question is too dumb to answer. I am a 12-year-old Catholic girl who goes to church every Sunday and I would ask my priest, but I'm afraid he would laugh at me. I have always wanted to be an altar boy.

Difficult to Stop When Kisses Begin

Is it possible for a girl to be an altar boy or not? — HOLY

DEAR HOLY: Traditionally, only boys can be altar boys, but the Catholic church has made many changes this past decade, and perhaps you'll live long enough to see girls serving the Mass.

DEAR ABBY: For several years now we have sent our son-in-law a cheque for his birthday. We used to buy him gifts, but it is so hard to pick out a gift to please a 28-year-old man we thought a cheque made more sense.

We have never received a thank-you, verbal or written.

He and out daughter live here in town, and we see them fairly often, so it would be a simple matter for him to say, "Thank you for the cheque."

The only way we know that he has received these cheques is because they come back cancelled with our bank statement.

Our son-in-law is not dumb. He went to college. He has a birthday coming up soon, and I'm considering sending him a card so he won't think we've forgotten him — but no cheque this time. His money is easier to come by than ours. Or should I just forget his birthday altogether? — PUZZLED

DEAR PUZZLED: I would.

WARRANTY AID

TORONTO (CP) — A household appliance service contract, also referred to as an extended warranty or maintenance contract, is a form of insurance for the consumer, says J. K. Lechnitz, market manager for the consumer products service of Canadian General Electric.

"A service contract does not replace or duplicate the warranty provided with an appliance or television set," he said. "It takes over where the warranty leaves off."

Lechnitz said fees are usually based on coverage for four years, beginning with the second year of the appliance's life.

"Service contracts extending beyond this period are gradually becoming more common, but at a somewhat higher cost. The best time to buy a service contract is when the appliance or TV set is purchased, although the contract is usually available at any time while the product is still under full warranty."

Otherwise the product must likely have to pass inspection before it qualifies for coverage.

By LESTER L. COLEMAN MD

Our 17-year-old daughter has a definite unpleasant body odor. Her friends notice it and she is becoming more and more embarrassed and isolated. Her bathing habits seem to be good. She uses underarm lotions and sprays, but none seems to be effective. Could there be some physical condition that causes this? Where can we go for help? — Mrs. E.K.

DEAR MRS. K.: There are no "odor specialists" to whose help I can refer you. There are a very few physical disorders responsible for such an unpleasant body odor.

If a physical condition does exist, it could be traced by your own doctor in your own community.

A group of apocrine glands are responsible for normal, healthy perspiration. Some bacteria seem to flourish in the secretion of these glands and can produce a bad odor.

There seems to be some advantage in controlling this by shaving the underarm hair. American women do this almost routinely. Men, too, seem to benefit by cutting their underarm hair shorter.

Despite the fact that your daughter "seems" to bathe frequently, more consideration should be given to the possibility that her personal hygiene is not entirely satisfactory.

Even with more rigid control it must be remembered that odors have a way of lingering in clothes, causing odors long after proper hygiene has been established. Occasionally, some drugs and combination of drugs may be responsible for embarrassing body odors.

How does one protect a newborn child from colds? I catch colds frequently and worry that I will give my baby my cold. — Mrs. C.S.

DEAR MRS. S.: It is not always possible for a mother to remove herself from a child's presence. A mask worn over the nose and mouth is moderate protection.

A better way of avoiding transmitting colds to infants and children is not to talk to them or coo over them and spread droplets of infected saliva in their direction.

Infants are harder than you suspect. You must not live in terror that your baby will catch cold.

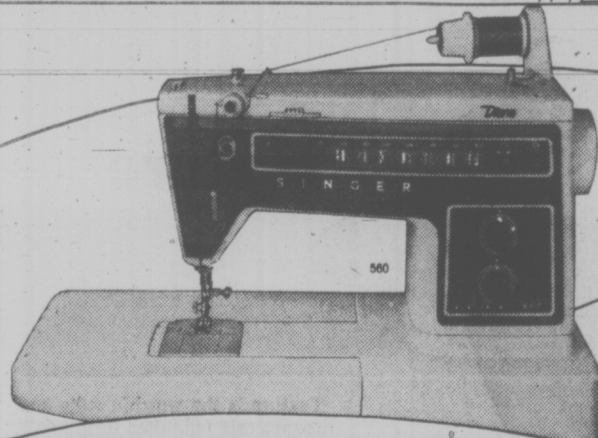

SPEAKING OF YOUR HEALTH... Don't underestimate the importance of a "sprain" or "strain" of the ankle. If swelling and pain persist, have the ankle X-rayed to be sure that a fracture does not exist.

Dr. Coleman welcomes letters from readers. Please write to him in care of The Times, 2521 Douglas St., Victoria, B.C.

Baby's Record Book Helps Track Growth

By HARRIET HART

Your baby will grow up so fast that you will find it difficult to remember when he first smiled, began to crawl and first attempted to feed himself.

The 32-page illustrated "Baby's Record Book" tells new mothers what to expect from their baby during his first year and how to care for him. It also provides space for the first picture of your baby and relevant details such as weight, length, hair color, etc. Another page is reserved to write down the baby's family tree back to his great-grandparents.

In addition you will find much valuable advice and tips which describe the behavior pattern of an average, healthy baby.

You will also learn how to get your baby used to eating solid foods, but don't make him eat more than he wants. Otherwise, he will become overweight.

This record will not only be helpful when you visit the pediatrician, but it will also rekindle fond memories in later years.

First Gallup 'Global' Survey Finds Family Satisfies Most

By AUSTIN SCOTT
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Family life gives people all over the world the greatest satisfactions.

North Americans and Western Europeans generally enjoy their jobs, while people in the developing countries overwhelmingly do not.

By 9 to 1, the people of the world favor increased conservation of animals and fish.

These are among the findings of the "first global public-opinion survey," published in the October issue of Reader's Digest. Ten thousand persons were interviewed for the survey.

Pollster George Gallup, author of the Digest article, said the dominant factor in the 18 volumes of findings was the economic gap between the "have" and the "have not" nations.

Two-thirds of those polled in Latin America, Africa and the Far East said they worry "all" or "most of the time" about meeting family expenses, Gallup reported.

Although North Americans and West Europeans "complain about making ends meet, three out of four of those interviewed admit that they worry 'almost never' or 'only some of the time' about finances," he said.

Other findings from the 2½ year effort involving 30 research groups working in nearly 70 countries:

—If given the opportunity, more than 20 per cent of the population of Latin America would emigrate to other countries.

—The great majority of the rural populations of underdeveloped countries yearn to move to the big cities, while more than half the people in developed countries would prefer to live in small towns, villages, or rural areas.

—On the average, people from the richest countries — those who live in North America, Australia and Western Europe — are more content with their family life, their countries, their communities, their educations, and with themselves.

—In advanced nations, most of those interviewed claim to have five or more close friends. But, as income and literacy fall, the number of close friends drops proportionately to two, one or none.

By majorities ranging from 60 per cent in Great Britain to 93 per cent in Africa, the people in every country polled except one, Japan, believe in God or a universal spirit, and claim to belong to a church, religious group or faith.

Among the advanced nations, it is only in the United States, Canada and Italy that the majority believe in life after death, or in the kind of God that observes, punishes, or rewards humans for their actions.

Gallup said the survey found that "no nation was so free of crime that people do not fear to walk some of their neighborhood streets at night," and that the happiness of a nation's inhabitants does not correlate closely with their suicide rate, or the amount of sunshine their country gets.

Ninety-three per cent of the people in Canada and the Scandinavian countries reported themselves very or fairly happy, even though Canada has long winters, and the Scandinavian countries get little sunshine and — except for Norway — have high suicide rates.

In Mediterranean, African, Latin American and Far Eastern countries, where sunshine is abundant and suicide rates are low, far fewer people reported themselves very or fairly happy.

According to the Digest article, nearly half of those interviewed in Latin America, Africa and the Far East said they were unable to pay for medical needs, half reported "insufficient money to provide their families with food," and a still higher percentage said there were times when they could not afford to clothe their families.

The survey found that 900 million persons "subsist on $75 a year — less than some skilled U.S. workers make in a single day."

In almost every country surveyed, the Digest said, people believed their lives improved over the past five years, and will improve more during the next five.

Food Tops List In World Survey

WASHINGTON — Sen. Richard C. Clark said Monday that an almost worldwide opinion poll by George Gallup suggested "a strange finding" — that while people recognize food supply as the world's No. 1 problem, governments act as though the No. 1 need is arms supply.

Clark said the United States is distributing less than one-third as much food this year, some 5 million tons, as it did 16 years ago, when it distributed 18 million tons, "despite the fact that crops last year and this year are the two best in the nation's history."

On the other hand, he said, arms transfers have increased enormously. He said the U.S. engaged in $1 billion in arms transfers in 1970 and $10 billion in 1974. "It was down to $8.4 billion in 1975 but it was $8.4 billion by Sept. 1 this year, and had gone over $10 billion again."

Clark said the emphasis of arms transfers "is not altogether our fault — the governments of other countries want them." He said the Gallup survey "indicated an enormous gap between people's needs, the needs they perceive, and the needs that governments, theirs and our own, see."

Clark's comments were made as Gallup presented some of the findings of what the pollster called the first "State of Mankind" study to the Senate foreign relations committee, of which Clark is a member.

In his presentation, Gallup said, "the one finding from the survey that had great impact on those of us who directed it is the appalling amount of poverty in the world today."

Gallup's findings were based on interviews with 10,000 people in 61 nations, representing two-thirds of the world's population.

'Look Forward'

THE HAGUE (AP) — Without referring directly to her husband's disgrace in the Lockheed scandal, Queen Juliana called on the Dutch today to put the past behind them and "look forward to the many things confronting us."

Prince Bernhard was scheduled to sit beside the queen in parliament's pictureque Hall of Knights as the monarch delivered her annual speech at the opening of the parliamentary session.

But this year Bernhard would be wearing civilian clothes instead of his customary military uniform.

"Undoubtedly thoughts now go back to the difficult period that lies behind us," the queen said in her prepared speech.

"Bearing in kind a common responsibility, let us today mainly look forward to the many things confronting us."

She then went on to discuss the government's legislative program.

Back in 1960, France defeated Italy in the World Team-of-Four Championship. All the observers agreed that Italy was most unlucky in that they frequently arrived at excellent slam contracts which were wrecked on the rocks of distribution. Today's deal is a case in point.

Opening lead: Two of ♠.

France was occupying the East-West seats. Italy was North-South, with Pietro Forquet sitting South. When North rebid his diamonds after South's two-club cue bid, Forquet felt that North was a favorite to have a diamond suit headed by the king. So he promptly contracted for the small slam in hearts.

West's opening club lead was won by East's ace, after which East took a long time to deliberate. He finally came to the conclusion that South's leap to six hearts was based on a good fit with North's rebid diamond suit; and hence there was the distinct possibility that West might be void of diamonds. So, at trick two East played a diamond — which West ruffed. When play had ended, South had actually gone down two tricks, for he couldn't avoid losing a spade trick.

It is apparent that if the adversely held four diamonds had been divided either 2-2 or 3-1, the slam contract would have been fulfilled, since South would have discarded his losing spade on North's fourth diamond. It took a 4-0 break in diamonds, with East the possessor of the four diamonds to defeat the slam.

The reader might ask the question: but didn't the French team when they held the North-South cards in the replay, also arrive at six hearts? And didn't the Italian East defender also lead a diamond at trick two?

Actually, the East defender did lead a diamond at trick two. But France didn't reach a six-heart contract. They played the hand at four hearts.

Convention Centre Need Outlined

New convention centres for Victoria and Vancouver are top priority items with the provincial government, department of travel convention coordinator John Plul said today.

"I can only do my job if there are large convention centres in both Vancouver and Victoria," Plul said in an interview.

"The minister (Grace McCarthy) knows that. The government knows that."

Plul said it is not clear whether these convention centres would be constructed with government subsidies or by private enterprise with the encouragement of the government, but both will have to be on the drawing boards before the end of the year.

He was in Victoria today to address a meeting of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce tourist and convention committee.

Plul said he is working this month to bring four major conventions to the province, but two of these will come only if the convention centres are built.

"What we are talking about is conventions in the 1980 to 1981 period. Large conventions are planned four years in advance. That gives us time to get convention centres constructed in time but only if they are on the drawing boards this year."

"The time for talking is passed. We must see some action if we are serious about bringing conventions to Vancouver and Victoria."

He said he would take his recommendations on the convention centres to McCarthy.

the minister in charge of the department of travel.

"However, she is already aware of the need for these convention centres and she considers it a top priority matter."

The question of funding the centres would be a matter for cabinet decision.

Plul told the chamber committee meeting he has been able to obtain several smaller conventions for B.C. in the 5 1/2 weeks since his appointment as convention co-ordinator for the department of travel.

He said the biggest impact in the United States has been created by department of travel promotions stressing the large fish that can be caught in the Campbell River area.

At major U.S. conventions, the B.C. department of travel runs a daily contest to have delegates guess the size of the largest fish caught near Campbell River that day.

"The excitement created by this type of contest is amazing. Everyone is asking questions about British Columbia."

Plul suggested Victoria stage a blitz in Seattle to encourage more tourists to come here and said a committee should be formed as early as next week to plan this activity.

Helen Beirnes said the Victorian Days association is working on this idea and several members plan to go to Seattle in costume.

Carmella Costigan has been re-appointed to supervise the Chamber of Commerce flower count promotion, which will be held in February. Egon Baumann is in charge of a clean-up campaign for the four local municipalities.

That Second Crash Was Ambulance

NANAIMO — Ambulance driver Raymond K. Houston, of Parksville, Sunday attended two highway crashes in succession, including his own.

The Island Ambulance he was driving on the highway near Superior Road collided with the rear of a car which pulled off to allow a police escort to pass, then pulled back into roadway before the ambulance had a chance to get by.

His passenger, Sheila Zink, 17, of Parksville, was transferred to another vehicle to take her to Royal Jubilee Hospital in Victoria, where she is reported in poor condition with head injuries.

Nanaimo RCMP said she had been involved in a Parksville accident in which a motorbike collided with a car.

A police car escorted the ambulance taking her to Nanaimo hospital because of heavy Sunday traffic.

A half-mile north of Superior Road, a car driven by Virginia F. Estlin, also of Parksville, made way for the police car, then apparently reentered the highway too soon.

The ambulance struck it, sending it into a ditch where it overturned. Estlin was treated for a leg injury.

Houston, whose ambulance remained upright in the north-bound lane of traffic, was not hurt.

Rockland-Fort Funds Likely

Members of Victoria's Hallmark Society are optimistic that Heritage Canada will invest a substantial sum in the restoration and preservation of buildings in the Rockland-Fort area.

Martin Segger, a Hallmark Society member who attended the annual meeting of Heritage Canada last weekend said Monday that favorable consideration is being given to a brief requesting about $2.5 million over the next 10 years to "recycle" architecturally and historically significant buildings in that area.

At the meeting in Montreal Heritage Canada president H. M. McDougall spoke "positively" about the Hallmark Society's brief, he said, and about the role of Victoria city council in preserving older buildings.

McDougall had referred to council's demolition freeze on 77 homes as one of the most tangible actions taken in the municipal field in Canada.

Segger said later this year Heritage Canada — a national independent, non-profit organization — will probably send representatives to conduct a feasibility study on the Rockland proposal.

If that has favorable results the agency may invite the provincial government and the city to participate in some way in the project, perhaps playing an indirect role.

Segger said Heritage Canada's involvement usually consists of buying historic structures, restoring them to a new use and then offering them for sale again.

So far its ventures have tended to vary considerably, from the restoration of rural villages to commercial buildings and even some landscaping. But as far as he is aware nothing similar to the Rockland-Fort scheme has been attempted.

Another Wounded Knee?

By BILL RICHARDS
Washington Post

KLAMATH, Calif. — A complex land dispute in this northern California wilderness area has escalated into an armed confrontation between authorities and a band of Indians who have cut off a section of the Klamath River at the height of the salmon-fishing season.

The action has provoked fears here among officials of a repeat of the clash four years ago between Indian activists and lawmen at Wounded Knee, S.D., after armed Indians seized land there.

The Indians and their sympathizers here, whose numbers have varied from 15 to more than 50, have been conducting what they are calling a "land convention" since Aug. 20 in a redwood grove 14 miles from the mouth of the river.

The encampment was undertaken to protest what they claim was fraudulent transfer of Indian lands a half-century ago to white timber interests with the complicity of the U.S. Bureau of Indian Affairs. Most non-Indian campers have been sent away from the isolated site here, which is owned by a Seattle timber company, and visitors to the encampment are met by Indian guards carrying rifles.

Last week, tension over the gathering mounted when the Indians hung a rope and nets across the Klamath and declared the river off limits to all but those boatmen they allow to pass.

A tour boat carrying 47 passengers and a local constable attempting to serve a court restraining order on the Indians was turned back by armed Indians. A shot was fired over the boat but the Indians claimed the shooting was done by an outsider who was not a member of their camp.

Federal officials, who have jurisdiction over the river, and the Humboldt County sheriff's department seek to avoid worsening what county district attorney John Buffington called "a potentially explosive situation."

Margaret Carlson, a 38-year-old Yurok Indian and the leader of the land convention, said the Indians and their followers do not plan to leave the grove until their land claims are settled in court.

GOV. 'BOUGHT' FOR $200,000?

BALTIMORE (WP) — Three businessmen who are among Maryland Gov. Marvin Mandel's closest friends "bought Marvin Mandel" with up to $200,000 worth of land, clothing, vacations, jewelry and life insurance, the chief federal prosecutor charged Monday in his opening argument in Mandel's political corruption trial.

In return, Assistant U.S. Attorney Barnett Skolnik said, the businessmen — former Maryland house majority leader W. Dale Hess and brothers William Rodgers and Harry Rodgers III — plus their attorney, Ernest Cory Jr., received for their business, including a race track, "a steady flow of benefits, almost all of them in secret."

In a two-hour opening statement, prosecutor Skolnik revealed several previously unreported examples of what the government alleged was a "pattern of corruption" involving Mandel and his co-defendants — Hess, the Rodgers brothers and Cory — beginning shortly after Mandel succeeded Spiro Agnew as governor in 1969.

Skolnik said Hess and the Rodgers brothers bought the governor $1,500 worth of clothing as a birthday present; paid life insurance premiums for Mandel in excess of $1,000; paid for "a few thousand dollars worth of travel" for Mandel and his family; "picked up the tab" for more than $5,000 worth of jewelry for members of Mandel's family and included him in two business partnerships allegedly worth $135,000 to the governor.

"Ladies and gentlemen," Skolnik told the jury, "we will prove that, beginning shortly after he became governor, these other men bought Marvin Mandel."

No Sweet Talk By Carter Now

By FRANK RUTTER
Special to The Times

PITTSBURGH — Jimmy Carter turned as strident as the whistle on his campaign train Monday.

This was not the soft-spoken candidate of love who seduced voters in the remarkable evangelical campaign of the primaries which culminated in his nomination.

This was no longer the dreamer of new American Dreams who spoke of trust and faith in a revival of political ethics.

It was not the outsider who promised to reform Gomorah-On-The Potomac. Not until the last of his seven speeches did a hint of that Carter peek through the traditional rhetoric delivered at high volume.

Carter rode the whistle-stop train across three states, involving the ghost of presidents past—the Democratic ones, who were good and did not lie, specifically Harry Truman (according to Carter) and the Republicans, who were bad, such as Calvin Coolidge, Herbert Hoover and, inviting his audiences to boo, with special emphasis on Richard Nixon.

The Democratic presidential candidate always began his speeches by asking, "Do you remember, Harry Truman?"

He was, of course, attempting to liken himself to the gritty whistle-stop campaigner of 1948 in a stunt aimed at stimulating wider public interest in himself for the first television debate with President Gerald Ford on Thursday.

His speeches were all similar, virtually to the point of tedious repetition in the ears of the 300 reporters travelling on the 13-car special which today completes a 960-mile journey to Chicago. Carter left the train here and his substitute to Chicago was his running-mate, Walter Mondale.

Carter generally got good receptions, the best in a Philadelphia suburb, and attracted crowds ranging up to several thousand. At every stop there was at least a knot of anti-abortion demonstrators, although he did not once mention that issue. Indeed, the only issues he discussed were unemployment and inflation and these only in superficial terms. He made two promises: to reform income tax laws and to guarantee automatic registration of voters at age 18, but did not elaborate.

Ford Funds Probed

WASHINGTON (UPD) — The Watergate special prosecutor is conducting an investigation of political contributions that may involve President Gerald Ford's past campaigns, The Wall Street Journal reported today.

The newspaper said special prosecutor Charles Ruff has subpoenaed records from Kent County, Mich., Republican officials and from a New York-based maritime union, the Maritime Engineers Beneficial Association.

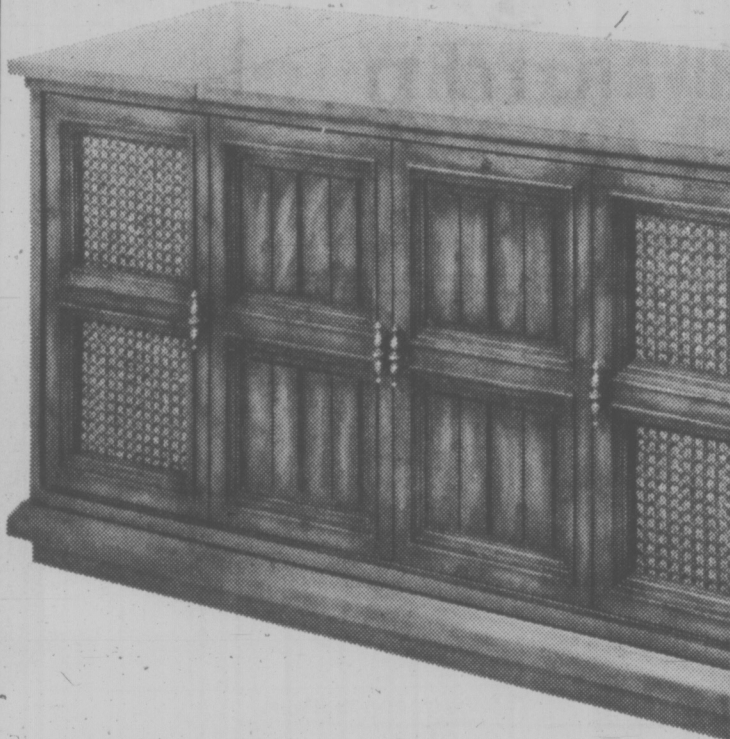

Kent County includes the president's hometown of Grand Rapids. The union, according to the newspaper, was Ford's biggest financial backer when he last ran for Congress from Michigan in 1972.

Ruff declined comment on the report, but The Journal reported that White House press secretary Ron Nessen said he knew nothing about any subpoenas.

Glomar Explorer Gets Mothballed

WASHINGTON (WP) — The U.S. Navy announced Monday that it is putting the Glomar Explorer in mothballs.

The celebrated mystery ship can still lift 2,000 tons from the ocean floor, but the government was unable to find anyone both willing and able to lease it.

Built at the behest of the Central Intelligence Agency, the 618-foot ship plucked parts of a sunken Soviet submarine from the Pacific Ocean floor two years ago in a top-secret operation code-named Project Jennifer.

More recently, however, it has been lying idle, at an approximate cost of $10,000 a day, the municipal docks in Long Beach, Calif., according to a spokesman for the General Services Administration.

The GSA, which puts the fair market value of the vessel at $65 million, advertised it from March through June for lease to U.S. citizens, but said that "no acceptable offers" were received.

"It's kind of a tough market," said one GSA official.

Currently, there are a number of (privately owned) drilling rigs just tied up to their piers. They're idle, too. And it would take a certain amount of money to convert the Glomar to an oil drilling rig or to adapt it for ocean mining.

Government officials said only two serious proposals to lease the ship were made, but both had to be rejected. One was "contingent" on getting adequate financing to set up a consortium. Another group simply offered to serve as brokers in finding customers to use the ship, but with the government continuing to foot the bills during idle periods.

A navy spokesman said it will cost about $2.1 million to deactivate the Glomar Explorer and move it 400 miles north to Suisun Bay, Calif., where it will join the National Defense Reserve Fleet.

Acrobat School Closing

BARABOO, WIS. (AP) — A spring acrobat school closed its last tightrope and tumbled their last tumble at Circus World Museum's training school. It's been closed because of high insurance rates.

"The kids are really upset," museum director William Schultz said Monday. "Some of them were headed for stardom."

He said refusal by insurance companies to offer a liability policy has forced him to close the school. Schultz said the school was founded here four years ago. The museum is operated by the state Historical Society on property that once belonged to the Ringling Brothers.

Schultz said the chief purpose of the school "was to show visitors how acrobats are trained, and to provide a great recreational outlet for our young people."

Ripple Effect In UAW Strike

DETROIT (AP) — As the strike against Ford Motor Co. in the United States begins to cause a chain reaction of layoffs at other companies, bargainers say they are not optimistic about renewed efforts to reach a settlement.

The United Auto Workers (UAW) and Ford resumed formal contract talks Monday for the first time since 130,000 workers walked off the job one week ago today.

At least 2,000 employees at Ford supply firms have been laid off along with 1,000 Ford workers in Canada as a result of the strike, the first against the No. 2 U.S. auto maker since 1967.

Spokesmen for several major automotive suppliers warned that layoffs would greatly increase by Oct. 1, if the walkout continued.

That prospect appeared almost certain, UAW sources said, because even with a quick settlement it would take a week for the membership to rally it.

The first layoffs at Ford of Canada Ltd. came at the Windsor, Ont., engine plant. Ford has said the U.S. strike eventually would idle all 14,000 hourly workers in Canada, due to parts shortages.

The UAW, which has separate but similar pacts with the Canadian subsidiaries of the U.S. car-makers, has extended its pact with Ford of Canada until a settlement is reached in the United States.

Talks are stalled over disputes concerning wages, health care and layoff benefits, pensions and a union demand for four paid days off to create new jobs.

SNORT FOR COURT greets news that Sweet Lips, a 240-pound pet Hampshire pig, is not a pet but a farm animal. Sweet Lips' owner, Drewry Little, of Virginia Beach, Va., had appealed a lower court conviction that his pig was not a pet, but the appeal court jury upheld the lower court's ruling and Little must pay a $10 fine and evict his pet.

Treasure Trove Melting Feared

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Police say they are concerned that thieves who stole about $750,000 worth of Spanish coins and jewelry from the Museum of Sunken Treasure here will melt their booty down to disguise it.

The gold and silver artifacts — some considered priceless — date back to 1715 and were recovered by divers from sunken Spanish galleons off Florida's east coast. They were stolen early Monday from the private museum here.

Museum officials said the value of the haul could only be estimated.

"The rarity and historic value of each item stolen makes it difficult to name specific values," said Alan McNair, vice-president of Patterson, Erie Corp., of Vero Beach, which has a controlling interest in the museum's operator, the Real Eight Corp.

Trolleys Return to Detroit

DETROIT (UPI) — The city that put the world on wheels has gone back to the rails — the trolley rails.

Three shiny, fire-engine red trolley cars clanged up Detroit's Washington Boulevard Monday, marking the first time in 20 years that trolley cars have rattled over the streets of the motor city.

The trolley line, running from Grand Circus Park to the Cobo Hall Convention Centre, is the first phase of a multi-million dollar downtown revitalization program.

Free fare and sunny, 70 degree weather helped pack the wooden trolleys full of shoppers, sightseers and businessmen.

"It's great," said Lane Breidenstein, 60, of suburban Berkley. "Too many people just go grunting through life, but this is something you can get excited about. I love the noise and even the creakiness."

The cars, all built around 1900, were part of a fleet of six purchased from Lisbon.

Overbooking Warning Ordered from Airlines

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Civil Aeronautics Board proposed Monday that airlines which overbook flights be required to give the public written notice of that fact, along with the possibility of compensation for those who are "bumped."

The board published the proposed rules in the federal register and invited interested parties to comment on them in writing by Oct. 11, after which the agency will decide on the final version to be put into effect.

Under the regulations, any airline which files notice of overbooking with the government would have to post a sign to that effect at all places where tickets are sold, and print the notice on the tickets.

At ticket counters in quarter-inch type, and on the ticket in 12-point type, the notification would say:

"Any of (the airline's name) flights may be overbooked and there is a slight chance that there will not be space on a flight for which a person has a confirmed reservation. A person denied boarding on such a flight may receive compensatory payment if (the airline) cannot arrange alternative transportation. A written statement of the rules for denied boarding compensation is available at the ticket counter."

The CAB said it considered requiring that the notice also be given by telephone when reservations are made, but rejected the idea because "the confusion which a form of 'earnest' statement would engender could well outweigh its benefits."

Current regulations require an airline to get the passenger to his destination within two hours of the originally scheduled time if he is bumped because of overbooking and meets certain other requirements.

Man 'Shanked' During Fracas, Court Told

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Staff

The companion of an accused man told a county court jury Monday he heard him say he had "shanked" or stabbed another man during a fracas involving occupants of two cars on the Island Highway in Colwood March 25.

Rodney Steigenberger was testifying at the trial of James Bryan McWilliams, 22, accused of causing bodily harm with intent to wound by stabbing Robbin Sheffield with a knife.

Steigenberger said he and McWilliams had been drinking since the previous afternoon and in the early hours of March 25 were in a car with a third person, Kelly Moriarty.

While driving in the Colwood area another car collided with the rear of his vehicle and then a station wagon pulled out "and appeared to be sandwiching my car." He tried to ram the car to get it out of his way.

A little later, the cars stopped and the occupants got out. He said he got out holding a jackstem and McWilliams also got out and he smashed two headlights of the other car.

He said McWilliams appeared to be "getting the worst" of a fight and said "let's get out of here, somebody's been shanked" and "let's get out of here, I've shanked somebody."

Steigenberger, who admitted to a criminal record involving a number of offences including one of robbery with violence, said the knife found by Colwood RCMP in his car and introduced into court as an exhibit was his knife.

Cross-examined by defence counsel Bill McElmoyle, he said he couldn't recall saying at the preliminary hearing that it was the station wagon which hit the rear of his car. He denied hitting Wayne Doerges, driver of the other car, or Sheffield with the jackstem and denied stabbing Sheffield.

Asked why he kept a knife in his car, he said "for stripping wires. I'm a mechanic."

Asked if that was for stripping ignition wires, he said "any kind of wires."

Sheffield, who said he is 18, testified he had been drinking the evening of March 24 in Victoria and Colwood pubs and was asleep in Doerges' car when he woke up hearing cars banging together.

The car stopped and someone was smashing windows. He stepped out and "I got hit over the back and something was shoved in my stomach."

He said he didn't see who did it.

In cross-examination, he recalled seeing Steigenberger by his car and as he left said "hit that son-of-a-bitch" and Doerges swerved towards him and just went by.

Asked why this happened, he said "I imagine I was mad because I just got stabbed." He agreed he was "pretty drunk."

Cpl. Walter Currie and Const. Able Gordon Dash of Colwood RCMP said they searched Steigenberger's car at the detachment early March 25 and found a knife between the seat cushion and the back rest of the front seat.

Knife Tossed Into a Bush

Douglas Martin said he had a conversation in a jail cell at Wilkinson Road and McWilliams told him of a stabbing a person twice in a parking lot and that he threw the knife into a bush and it was possible Steigenberger could show police where this was.

He admitted to a lengthy criminal record, mostly involving thefts, false pretences and stolen property, including perjury last July.

Cross-examined by McElmoyle, Martin said McWilliams didn't say whether the other person was male or female or where the parking lot was.

He said police had discussed with him giving evidence in this and other criminal cases, that he asked for "some consideration" that nothing was offered and nothing was done later for him.

Testimony from Doerges was read from the preliminary hearing transcript because, McElmoyle said, he is in hospital with serious injuries from a car accident.

Doerges said the other car started striking his car and he set off in chase and the station wagon followed him.

When the cars stopped, Steigenberger hit him with the jackstem, he said. He got back in the car and Steigenberger was breaking the windows. He said neither he nor his companions in his car had a knife. Asked if he was drunk, he said "yeah."

In summing up before the jury, Crown counsel Gordon Macdonald said there is "no question there was deplorable conduct all around" and McElmoyle said there had been "preposterous behavior."

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A charge that a 23-year-old Saskatchewan prison inmate was unlawfully at large when he failed to complete a trip to Victoria on his own was dropped Monday in Victoria provincial court before Judge Harold Alder.

The charge against Terrance Edwin Halverson was stayed by prosecutor Robert Mulligan, who said he expected Halverson "will be incarcerated on the original warrant."

Details of Halverson's original offence were not given in court but it was known he was serving a federal prison term in Prince Albert, Sask., and was allowed a day parole for a transfer to the community correctional centre on Pandora in Victoria.

Halverson was put on a bus June 23 in Prince Albert for an unescorted trip to Vancouver with funds to buy a ticket for the final trip to Victoria. He did not arrive June 24 as scheduled and his day parole was terminated.

He was arrested recently in Alberta and brought to Victoria for hearing on a warrant charging him with being unlawfully at large June 25 in Victoria.

However, Mulligan said outside court the charge might more properly have been unlawfully at large in Alberta at the point of arrest. In addition, he said, it was expected Halverson would be returned to penitentiary to complete his original term.

Alder allowed release for Patrick James Stenson, 3138 Milgrove, on his own recognizance in the sum of $1,000 to cover two charges, both dated Sunday in Victoria. One contained separate counts of carrying a concealed weapon and possession of a knife for a purpose dangerous to the public peace and the other contained three counts of common assault. Alder prohibited publication or broadcast of bail-hearing details and remanded both charges one week for further hearing.

In the court section of Judge Douglas Campbell, Ronald Glen Westad, 33, was committed to higher court for trial after a preliminary hearing on a Saanich charge of escaping March 23 from Wilkinson Road jail.

HAVE KIDNEY WILL TRAVEL?

OTTAWA (CP)—Organ donor cards have been enclosed with some airline tickets mailed out by Air Canada headquarters in Montreal.

But protests about the Kidney Foundation of Canada brochures evidently surprised airline public relations officials. One official said the person who sent out the brochures would be asked to stop.

The Kidney Foundation of Canada is seeking your pledge of not only kidneys, but, if you desire, any or all organs that may be transplanted upon death to others who desperately need them to survive.

Like Ontario driver's licences, the back cover of the folder is an official donor card allowing the traveller to give away what he chooses for medical transplants or research.

An Air Canada official said in a telephone interview from Montreal that someone from the airline apparently picked up an armload of Kidney Foundation brochures to support the foundation's campaign to increase awareness of the severe shortage of organs for transplant.

June was organ donor month in Quebec.

The Air Canada official said there had been protests about sending the brochures to people who were about to board Air Canada flights. The brochures were sent out by the airline's ticket-by-mail branch.

The organ donor idea was not airline policy, he said. The airline view was that if it backed one worthy cause, it would be flooded with requests for support from other groups.

A Kidney Foundation spokesman indicated concern about public reaction to including the foundation brochures with airline tickets.

"People might become a bit leery about flying," he said. "These things have to be evaluated."

'DOUBLE SEAT' UNDERWEAR FOR PENS

OTTAWA (CP)—The government is spending $81,630 on new double-reinforced underwear for prisoners in federal penitentiaries, the department of supply and services says in its latest contract bulletin.

The bulletin shows that a contract has been awarded to Penmans Ltd. of Montreal to manufacture 56,018 pairs of underpants reinforced with what the company calls "double seats."

"That's because the prisoners have to do a lot of sitting down," a spokesman for the department said Monday in an interview.

The underpants are plain, white cotton briefs described as summer wear. Long johns or thermal underwear were not ordered because penitentiary prisoners do not go outside often, the spokesman said.

"I guess if any of them started asking for long johns, the prison staff could assume an escape bid was in the air."

Flu Shot Delay Urged

FREDERICTON (CP)—A program to vaccinate millions of Canadians against swine flu should be delayed until there is more evidence that it is necessary, provincial health ministers said today.

But they said an immunization program for an estimated 1.5-million senior citizens and chronically ill persons should go ahead as soon as the vaccine is available, probably in mid-November.

In addition, they recommended that planning for the larger immunization program continue, just in case.

The modified vaccination program, to be recommended to all 10 provincial governments once the ministers return home, was announced in a four-page communique issued as the ministers ended two days of private talks.

The ministers said they made the recommendation because there hasn't been a case of swine flu since February, when it was discovered at a military base in New Jersey.

In Vancouver, provincial epidemiologist Dr. A. A. Larsen said Monday swine flu vaccine will be available in B.C. after Oct. 15 provided there are no further hitches in manufacture and testing.

The first shipment is due Oct. 9 and the entire million doses earmarked for B.C. should be in hand by early December, he said.

Consumer Spending The Key

Times News Services
OTTAWA—A private economic research group says economic recovery is under way, but how much depends on the willingness of householders to spend on consumer goods.

The Conference Board in Canada said Monday in its latest quarterly forecast that real growth in total output of the economy will be five per cent in 1976 while unemployment will grow gradually to a peak of 7.5 per cent in 1977.

Citing recent economic growth and moderation of price increases, the board said the recovery appears to be similar to post-war economic recovery with consumer spending and new housing activity providing a good part of the early strength and the trade sector about to play a positive role as well.

"The real question at this point concerns the longevity of the cyclical recovery with the outlook for investment spending remaining poor and with a policy environment that is less stimulative than in past post-war recoveries."

Businessmen have complained that the federal anti-inflation program, particularly rules restricting profits, have led to a decline in investment which is hampering a faster improvement.

There have also been slow-downs in investment in the U.S., which does not have wage-and-price controls.

The board says that 1976, increased spending on consumer goods in real terms will grow by 5.7 per cent, with a decline to five per cent next year.

But while it says increased consumer spending will be an important source of growth, projected growth rates are still moderate compared with

Blast Kills Ex-Chile Diplomat

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Two persons, including a former foreign and defence minister of Chile who was ambassador to the United States during the government of Salvador Allende, were killed today when a bomb demolished a car in northwest Washington.

Hospital officials identified the former Chilean official as Orlando Letelier, 44, an ally of Allende who lived in Washington.

A socialist, he served as consultant to the Inter-American Development Bank in Washington before being named ambassador in 1970. In 1973 he was named foreign minister and became defence minister a month before Allende was overthrown and died.

Also killed was Ronnie Karpman, 25, a staff member of the Transnational Institute of Policy Studies where Letelier was a director. Her husband, Michael, was in fair condition in hospital.

Smith Accepts Black Rule, Tanzanian President Told

Times News Services

DAR ES SALAAM — President Julius Nyerere of Tanzania said today he has been told by U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger that Prime Minister Ian Smith has accepted the principle of black-minority rule for Rhodesia within 18 months to two years.

As a consequence, Nyerere told a news conference, he is no longer "gloomy about prospects for a Rhodesian settlement."

He said after a 90-minute meeting with Kissinger that he awaits a public statement from Smith's white-minority regime Friday.

"My mood is better," Nyerere said.

Meanwhile in Salisbury, Smith's cabinet today adjourned crucial talks after more than three hours of what he called "straight talking."

Smith's 21-member cabinet is to meet again Wednesday.

"You cannot accept big proposals in a rush," he said.

The Rhodesian leader told reporters that if the cabinet and his parliamentary party caucus accept the proposals, a two-thirds majority would be needed for approval in the House of Assembly lower house of Parliament. All constitutional amendments require such a majority.

Smith said the final decision on whether the package is acceptable would effectively rest with Thursday's meeting of the 50 members of Parliament representing the ruling Rhodesia Front Party.

A senior U.S. official in Kissinger's party said that following his talks with southern Africa's white leaders he now is seeking two pledges which Smith wants from the area's black leaders.

One is that all guerrilla action in Rhodesia be suspended as soon as negotiations begin for a constitution providing for the transfer of power to the black majority.

The second is that the security and interests of Rhodesia's 270,000 whites be effectively safeguarded when power is transferred to the six million blacks.

The minister said he doesn't think it's right that a person can make application for Mincome after being in Canada for only two years.

The minister says the immigrants will, be and large, draw more benefits in the first year than they would ever have paid in income tax or other contributions.

Vander Zalm, who immigrated to Canada from Holland many years ago, says some nationalities are worse than others, but he wouldn't name specific countries.

Talks

Collapse

VANCOUVER (CP)—Talks in the province-wide Safeway labor dispute ended Monday for the second time after nine days of mediation.

Independent mediator Clive McKee said although agreement was reached in some areas, it was not sufficient for the parties to reach a settlement.

No further talks are scheduled.

The negotiations under McKee between Canada Safeway and the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union started for the second time on Sept. 11.

McKee withdrew from the dispute Sept. 7 after exploratory talks failed to resolve issues that closed 93 retail stores.

A key union demand in the dispute which has idled about 5,300 employees is for a clause allowing the right to strike over non-economic issues. The clause was contained in the previous contract but ruled illegal by the B.C. Labor Relations Board.

Employees were locked out Aug. 19 at the company's McDonald's Consolidated Ltd. and the next day at Empress Foods and Lucerne Foods, company house brands. Safeway retail outlets closed soon after because of a lack of supplies.

FORD BRINGING OUT 3-CYLINDER MOTOR

DETROIT (UPI)—The Ford Motor Co. announced plans today to introduce within the next two years a six-cylinder engine that can switch to three-cylinder operation to save fuel.

Ford president Lee Iacocca said a fuel savings of about 10 per cent can be expected from the new power plant. He said the engine will be used initially on some Ford trucks within the next 24 months.

The electronically controlled power plant is called the "dual displacement engine" because it can operate on either six or three cylinders.

The heart of the system is an electronic control module that deactivates half of the engine's cylinders when the vehicle is cruising at highway speeds of approximately 45 miles per hour, or when it is decelerating down to the 25 m.p.h. range.

The module then reactivates the idle cylinders when they are needed for additional power.

Iacocca said preliminary testing indicates the principle can be applied to large and small engines, V-8s as well as sixes.

Bank Can't Find Right Woman

TORONTO (CP)—Robert MacIntosh, executive vice-president of the Bank of Nova Scotia, said Monday his bank has been unable to find a woman to sit on its board of directors.

MacIntosh said his bank has been looking for a woman to sit on the 36-member board since late last year.

"I guess the biggest single problem has been the Bank Act," he said. "It requires a person who sits on the board to own 2,500 shares of the bank's stock although there is a provision for a smaller amount in some cases."

At the bank's present share price of $43, MacIntosh said, that would mean holdings worth more than $100,000.

The Bank of Nova Scotia is the second Canadian chartered bank to say it has been unable to find a woman to sit on its board. The Royal Bank of Canada recently said it has been unable to find a suitable woman despite a country-wide search.

MacIntosh said the Bank of Nova Scotia has had active discussions with women's organizations about the subject for some time. He said he expects a decision on the issue will probably be taken later this year.

'Gold-Plated' Subdivisions

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis should unfreeze farm land and do something about soaring servicing costs if he wants to keep the price of lots down, Victoria housing development spokesmen said Monday.

They were commenting on a statement by Curtis that the provincial government will control impost fees in hopes of keeping lot prices in line. Impost fees are charged by some municipalities to defray costs of trunk line water and sewer pipes and are in addition to the costs of servicing individual lots.

Mike Kipot, immediate past president of the local branch of Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada, said impost fees play only a small role in lot costs.

The main villains, he said, are the servicing costs and municipal regulations which hamper development.

Kipot said the average building lot on the Saanich peninsula is selling at $28,000, up 22 per cent from $23,000 one year ago.

Prime Gordon Head lots have soared to $35,000 up 40 per cent from about $25,000 at this time last year.

"Lots could be serviced for manding underground wiring and this is adding another $1,000 per lot," he said.

Control of impost fees, which range from nothing in the Colwood-Langford area to as high as $2,300 in some Lower Mainland areas, would be useful but failed to tackle the main issues, Kipot said.

There is a housing shortage because municipalities discourage development, which, they believe, is a drain on municipal taxes, he said. "Every time a lot is developed it will cost them money because the cost of servicing is higher than the tax revenue from the property. All housing is subsidized. But so is health and welfare. We should be prepared to subsidize housing so people can have a roof over their heads."

This funding should come from the provincial and federal government to a greater extent, he said. Senior governments should pay the full cost of trunk line water supplies and sewers.

On the local level, municipalities could reduce lot prices by easing their restrictions.

Kipot suggested lot sizes be reduced to a standard of 50 feet by 100 feet, instead of 60 to 65 by 120.

"You can build a very good three-bedroom home on a 50 by 100 foot lot, 5,000 square feet of land."

Home buyers should have the option of whether they want overhead or underground wiring. More expensive developments could have it underground but more modest subdivisions should have the option of cheaper overhead wiring.

Road widths need only be about 40 feet for dead-end roads but many municipalities insist upon a minimum of 66 feet, he said.

"We are ending up with gold-plated subdivisions. Municipalities are overreacting."

As an example, he said, a new subdivision in Northern Saanich is selling lots in the range of a minimum of $33,250 to a top price of $51,000.

"This is getting out of all reason. That is the price for the lot alone before a house is constructed."

Unless the provincial government played a stronger role it was unlikely the municipal councils would act because they are under tremendous pressure from community and environmental groups, especially in Saanich.

Ron Scattergood, a builder in the western area, said control of impost fees will do nothing for the Colwood-Langford area because there aren't any.

What the western region needs is more land that can be removed from the farm freeze and subdivided, he said.

Although the cost of servicing lots is small, in the range of $2,000 to $3,000, prices have soared in Colwood and Langford because of the land shortage and in sympathy with lot prices in Gordon Head and other areas.

He said building lots in the west are selling around $25,000, up 25 per cent from $20,000 one year ago.

The few people with raw land to sell have pushed the price up to about $60,000 per acre.

"It is a question of supply and demand. There is a shortage of land and those who have it are charging top dollar."

If more land were unfrozen and put on the market, the price would come down, Scattergood said.

Premier Bill Bennett can rest easy today.

That much-publicized attempt to move non-confidence in da preem just didn't materialize Monday night at the annual meeting of the Esquimalt Social Credit Association.

The fact it didn't, means (a) think before you write, (b) check your sources carefully.

We can hardly wait for a follow story charging that the alleged mover behind the "dump Bill" campaign was muzzled, leaned on, etc., but that might stretch what was a non-story too far.

Mind you, there are some journalists with pretty elastic principles around . . .

He was about 17, dressed in grubby casual clothes, and standing on his head on a little patch of grass beside the Oxford Village shopping centre. But the final scene came a minute later when he ran back to the patch of grass, dropped to his knees, and started picking up coins which had fallen from his pockets.

★ ★ ★ "Saanich Issues" will be aired on channel 10, starting Thursday, and it will be interesting to see how the municipality's elected officials react to a new format.

Last year, the program was in the hands of Mayor Ed Lum and some of the aldermen. The protest wasn't official, but we're informed that some aldermen objected to the constant exposure that seemed to be enjoyed by some of their "rivals" on council.

This year, the change of format brings in stockbroker Gerry Connor as a "neutral" moderator. Connor can be outspoken at times enough to suggest that some of last year's objectors may wind up wishing they had last year's format.

The program runs from 9 to 10:30 p.m.

"In these days of heavy financial pressure on the municipal budgets and increasing demand for recreational facilities, it is imperative that recreational needs be prioritized and decisions be made on solid, quantitative information. Master planning is a tool designed to assist your council in making the right decisions."

Outside Workers Going Out

The city of Victoria's outside workers voted unanimously Monday night to support the Oct. 14 day of protest against wage controls, a spokesman said today.

The vote by members of Local 50 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees came just one week after CUPE inside workers (members of Local 388) voted overwhelmingly not to take part in the one-day strike by the Canadian Labor Congress.

Local 50 president Jim Walker, who had earlier denounced membership apathy and disinterest, stepped down and the meeting elected Bill Doherty as his successor.

Doherty, a fitter-mechanic in the waterworks section of the public works department, has been employed by the city since 1964.

$20,000 Jewel Theft

Victoria police are investigating the disappearance of a package containing more than $20,000 worth of jewelry destined for the Bay.

The jewelry—80 rings and four pairs of earrings—had been air-freighted over from The Bay in Vancouver and was being held at the Air West terminal at the Inner Harbor for pickup.

Police said a man wearing a brown suit and looking like a businessman walked into the office at 6:50 p.m. last Thursday, said his name was J. Whittaker and said he was to pick up a parcel for The Bay.

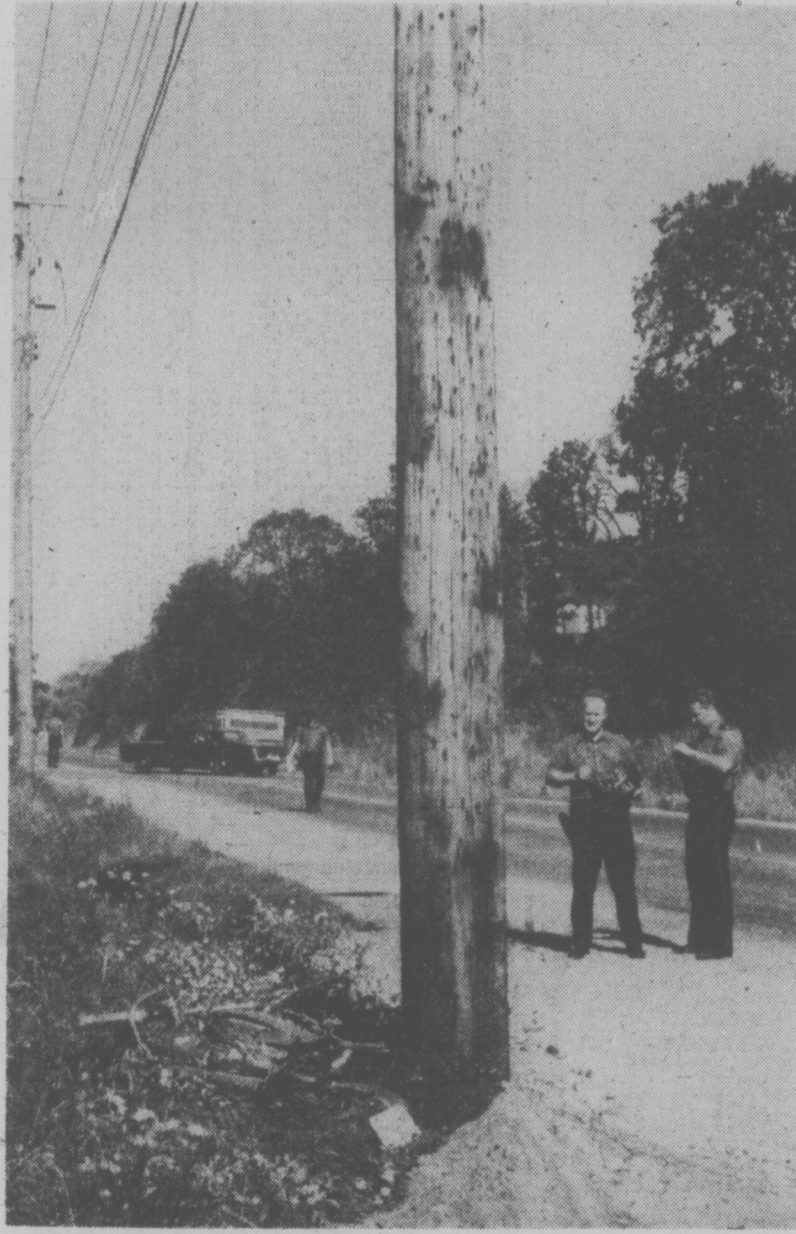

He signed an invoice slip, took the package and left.

Police described the man as 28 to 30, six feet tall, weighing 150 to 180 pounds with blond short hair and clean shaven.

The package was not missed until the next morning when the Vancouver store telephoned to inquire if the package had arrived safely.

"What package?" came the reply.

Police were alerted at 10:15 a.m. Friday.

RIDER'S LEG AMPUTATED

A 23-year-old Victorian has lost a leg as result of injuries received Monday when his motorcycle collided with a pickup truck on Interurban near Grange in Saanich.

Smith and his passenger,

Susan Keck, 20, of 929 Easter, each suffered two broken legs and internal injuries in the accident.

Keck is reported in fair condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital while Smith is also in fair condition at Victoria General.

Saanich police said the motorcycle glanced off the front of the pickup truck then swerved out of control for about 300 feet, hitting one pedestrian and just missing another.

The driver of the truck, Alfred Dumesnil, 658 Langford, was not hurt.

Pedestrian Mrs. Annette Pope, 33, of 3934 Mimosa suffered shock and bruises while her companion, Diane Brayton of 3437 Mimosa was unhurt.

Cowichan Railway 'Vital'

Rail transport will be vital to the Cowichan Valley and Greater Victoria in years to come, the Canadian Transport Commission's railway committee was told today.

The committee, sitting at The Empress, is considering a CN application to abandon 65 miles of line between Colwood and Deerholme.

Strongly opposing the application, the Cowichan Valley Regional District in a brief said the withdrawal and downgrading of rail transportation has far reaching effects on regional economy, community development, and individual citizens.

"In order to ensure the economic future of the Cowichan Valley Regional District, the board believes this rail line must be maintained for the foreseeable future, it stated.

It observed that second growth timber resource will be harvested in the very near future along much of the right-of-way.

"In fact there is enough logging being done now in the vicinity of the line to make the line profitable if the CN management went after the business," it stated.

Barbara Wallace, MLA for Cowichan-Malahat, supported the regional district's brief.

She warned that if the railway line is abandoned that British Columbians, and Vancouver Islanders particularly, would feel sorely discriminated against because the federal government had not fully honored the Terms of Union under which it undertook to ensure the provision of rail and water transport services.

"For a national railway controlled by Ottawa to be allowed to drop this specific long-held and important feeder line can only add to that sense of grievance and spread resentment far beyond the boundaries of the Cowichan Valley Regional District," she said.

She said a federal agency should not restrict its assessment to dollars and cents at the peril of ignoring the good-will factor.

"After all, goodwill, not economics, is the rock on which the unity of this east-west nation was founded and still exists," she said. "Cowichan Valley needs this line — not just for convenience or to balance the current books — but to grow to its potential."

Westrail Enterprises Ltd., of Victoria, said as an alternative to the CN maintaining the line, the railway could be sold or leased for a token sum to an agency such as the provincial government.

"Alternatively, the provincial government or a local authority at the municipal or regional district level could maintain the line and sub-lease the right to operate freight service to an independent operator, he said.

School Board Backs Porn Fight

Greater Victoria school board will join a one-woman fight against pornography.

But trustee Dr. Mark Fisher thinks his colleagues on the board are chasing the wrong evil.

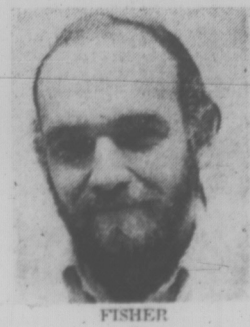

Trustees Monday heard a plea from Mrs. Joan Drew, of 328 Gibbs Road, asking the board to write Attorney General Garde Gardom offering to support his efforts to curb the availability of pornographic magazines in stores.

In a prepared statement Mrs. Drew said there is no historical instance where control of obscenity has endangered freedom, but "there is a correlation between sexual permissiveness and decline of civilization."

Pornographic magazines locally are "either prohibited or freely available," she said.

Mrs. Drew said sex cannot be allowed to get to the point where "sexual aberration is a satisfactory way of life."

But Fisher said there is a

question of priorities and that materialism, drugs and alcohol are greater problems.

Pornography is an offshoot, a secondary symptom of other serious social problems, Fisher said.

Mrs. Drew said in two stores of a drug store chain in Victoria, pornographic magazines are readily available to children. In one instance the magazines are on the floor where children have easy access to them. In another store, pornographic magazines are displayed across the aisle from school supplies, she said.

She said she circulated a petition objecting to the store's policy.

Vice-chairman Susan Brice suggested the best way for Mrs. Drew to continue her campaign is through consumer pressure such as the petition.

But when it came to the vote, only Fisher opposed writing Gardom offering the board's support.

Housing! They All Replied

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

As far as residents of the Fernwood-Springridge area are concerned, the No. 1 priority for expenditure of Neighborhood Improvement Program funds is housing, city aldermen were told today.

Reporting to the housing and neighborhood improvement committee on the results of a month-long survey of the area, planning director Geoff Greenhalgh said residents gave housing "by far" the highest rating of importance.

The Fernwood opinion poll was in contrast to earlier surveys in James Bay and Victoria West, where in each case the residents agreed the greatest need was for community recreation facilities.

In Fernwood, social facilities ranked only fifth on a list of six items suggested as the basis for a "shopping list" for the area's $1 million NIP budget.

The door-to-door survey contacted 1,600 of the 2,600 homes in the neighborhood, where residents have protested in recent months about the demolition of single-family homes for apartment and townhouse development.

Greenhalgh said the computer analysis of questionnaire answers shows the following response to the question "What is your order of priority of the types of projects listed?"

Housing, 383; neighborhood clean-up, 295; parks and open space, 222; traffic improvement, 190; social facilities, 154; municipal services, 90.

A big majority of respondents (710) said the acquisition of land for low-cost family housing should be a high priority, and almost the same number chose single-family detached housing in a list of housing style preferences.

In this category, 199 replies favored the conversion of larger homes to suites, while 120 suggested duplex development. Townhouses were endorsed by 129 residents, and three-storey frame apartments by 111.

Greenhalgh noted that under the parks and open space heading, residents did not advocate the acquisition of additional parkland but the improvement of existing amenities, and particularly the provision of small neighborhood playlots and open spaces.

He suggested that once the results of the analysis have been made available to the Fernwood-Springridge NIP committee, city and community representatives put together a more detailed priority list to reflect residents' wishes.

Three More Named

Three more court martials will be held in connection with funds missing from the junior ranks mess club at CFB Esquimalt.

Master Cpl. Michael Joseph Dalrymple will be tried Sept. 28 and Master Cpl. Adolph Plewa and former Master Cpl. Craig Campbell face court martial Oct. 19.

They were named today as court-martial proceedings started against Cpl. Robert Garner, 32, before judge advocate Lt.-Col. J. B. Fay and a five-member panel of officers.

Garner faces 24 charges covering a three-year period during which he was president of the mess, now known as Club 44.

Involved are missing funds amounting to $525 and quantities of liquor and other goods.

The charges include improper acts under the Military Code of Discipline and fraud and conspiracy involving Dalrymple, Plewa and Campbell, a former member of the Armed Forces.
